FOREWORD

There is no adequate excuse for the delay in the preparation of this report, and therefore I offer none. It is admittedly an interim report and shows the effect of lack of pressure on slow-answering or retiring classmates.

In the preparation of this report and with the continuing secretarial duties, I have become aware of the fact that with increasing years the Class is becoming more solidified. We are evidencing it by more tolerance of Class matters, by interest in each other and by a manifest desire to help out when called upon. I think the 25th Reunion made the difference in our attitude towards each other. The importance and enduring greatness of Harvard grows upon us as the years go by and the position that 1910 has achieved among the Classes and in the world at large have given us a pride in our association.

RECORDS OF THE CLASS

ELMER DAVIS ADAIR

OCCUPATION: Lawyer, cor. Smith and Mills Sts., Dunmore, Pa.

HOME ADDRESS: Chinchilla, Pa.

MARRIED: Bertice Carpenter, Scranton, Pa., July 28, 1915.

CHILD: Marjorie June, Feb. 3, 1927.

Adair adds nothing to these statistics.

✠ EDWIN KING ADAMS

MARRIED: Edith Novella DeGrant, New York, N. Y., Aug. 15, 1915.

CHILDREN: Elsie, June 23, 1918, Westchester State Teachers College.

Beatrice, Dec. 1, 1923.

DIED: Detroit, Mich., Nov. 25, 1935.

Edwin K. Adams came to college from the Central High School in Philadelphia, but withdrew at the end of the sophomore year, because of a serious operation. He obtained a law degree from the University of Pennsylvania Law School, in 1911, and for three years thereafter practiced law in Philadelphia. He then moved to Detroit and was in manufacturing for the next ten years, returning to the law, in which he continued up to the time of his death.

Leaving college after two years as he did, he did not early have the interest in the Class that he might have had if he had remained the full four years, and for a very considerable time was on the Lost List, but by the time of the 25th Reunion he had again become an active member of the Class and sent his pictures and a short sketch for the Class Book.

On August 15, 1915, he married Edith Novella DeGrant, in New York. They had two daughters: Elsie, now a graduate of West Chester State Teachers College, Pennsylvania, who is teaching school in Massachusetts, and Beatrice, a junior in the Overbrook High School, Philadelphia.

GEORGE CARLTON ADAMS

MARRIED: Elizabeth Covel, Longwood, Mass., June 26, 1926.

CHILDREN: Alice Elizabeth, May 11, 1927.

George, Jr., Sept. 2, 1928.

Adams has not been heard from.

✠ JOSEPH WEBSTER ADAMS

UNMARRIED.

DIED: Saranac Lake, N. Y., Aug. 2, 1914.

Adams' obituary will be found in the Twenty-fifth Anniversary Report.

JOHN STUART AGEN

HOME ADDRESS: 6135 Arcade Bldg., Seattle, Wash.

Agen has not been heard from.

EARL AUGUSTUS ALDRICH

OCCUPATION: College teacher. Professor of English, Drew University, Madison, N. J.

HOME ADDRESS: 58 Hillside Ave., Madison, N. J.

MARRIED: Elizabeth Orlady Wood, Brooklyn, N. Y., June 15, 1916.

CHILDREN: Elizabeth Hulbert, Mar. 13, 1917, Univ. North Carolina '39.

David Bradshaw, Dec. 9, 1918, Harvard '40.

My activities have been teaching, getting two children through college, and building a house. My hobbies are books and the theatre (now and then). My only publications are some reviews in our university quarterly, The Gateway. My chief recreation was a trip to Europe last summer. The University gave me sabbatical leave for the first half of this year; my wife and I planned to spend the summer in England, and the fall and early winter on the Continent. The war sent us home at the end of September, after a wonderful three months of sight-seeing and a month of England at war. The sabbatical is merely postponed, thanks to the good will of the University.

RECORDS OF THE CLASS

FRED CAMMEYER ALEXANDER

OCCUPATION: Salesman, 600 Memorial Drive, Cambridge, Mass.

HOME ADDRESS: 87 Fair Oaks Ave., Newtonville, Mass.

MARRIED: Grace Louise Somers, Newtonville, Mass., June 25, 1921.

I have carried on about the same activities as I mentioned in the twenty-fifth report,—tennis, swimming, hiking, sailing, etc. Hold about the same community organization offices. Have finally given up choral singing for a while, at least; but have started a history of the Alexander family in America to take up my spare time. Have helped to build a fine new branch library in Newtonville, that has just been dedicated.

✠ ARTHUR FREDERIC ALLEN

MARRIED: Eunice Chandler, Feb. 19, 1925.

CHILDREN: Elizabeth Chandler, Feb. 17, 1926.

CHILDREN: Lea Thom, June 17, 1922.

Thomas Gardner, Jr., Mar. 28, 1925.

Just before our Twenty Fifth, I found myself in the rear rank of the army of the unemployed. However, the reunion brought me luck, because after a welcome interval in which to rest, and recover from the excitement, I landed a job, at which I have been busily and pleasantly engaged ever since.

My activities outside of business have been concentrated more and more on fooling around our place in Chestnut Hill. Aided by my family, I have transplanted, dug, lawn-mowed, and this year even cut two cords of firewood. I am proud to say that I have worked up a splendid technique on a two-man saw, my son doing practically all of the work and I looking extremely busy. I also do a little whittling, not to be confused with wood carving, and sometimes succumb to pressure and make something useful for the home.

I am interested in two charities, the Seamen's Church Institute of Philadelphia, and the Inter-Agency Council for Youth.

I usually eat luncheon at the Harvard Club of Philadelphia, and while there do my utmost to uphold the dignity and reputation of the Class.

My wife and I are having a lot of fun and interest in seeing our children grow up, and the family remains an ideally happy one.

WILLIAM FREDERICK AVERY

OCCUPATION: Accountant and auditor, 67 Wall St., New York, N. Y.

HOME ADDRESS: 242 East 19th St., New York, N. Y.

MARRIED: Helene Marie Ferro, New York, N. Y., June 19, 1920.

The memory of the wonderful time we had at the Twenty-fifth reunion has been so fresh in my mind that I was quite surprised to hear a knock at the door announcing the arrival of the request for a blurb for the Thirtieth Anniversary Book.

Naturally, my activities during the last five years have been fewer in number and variety than during the preceding twenty-five years. They have, however, been quite as intense, due to the birth of a new hobby, navigation. It all started with an announcement by the Downtown Athletic Club that members could attend courses in the handling of small pleasure boats to be given by the newly formed North River Power Squadron, a unit of the United States Power Squadrons. I became so interested that I went through all they had to offer, even to buying a fine old sextant and "shooting" a lot of celestial bodies. As a result I passed through the various ranks offered by the squadrons, namely, advanced pilot, junior navigator, and finally the coveted rank of "navigator." The British Navy has not yet swarmed up the front path to get me to exercise the "Queen Elizabeth," but that is probably due to the fact that she is being held at the dock for the present.

HARVARD CLASS OF 1910

My wife, for whom I still unconsciously furnish a great deal of amusement, has derived particular entertainment from the way I solemnly get myself up in the full regalia of the squadron uniform once a week to go down and harangue those now taking the same courses I sneaked through.

In the summer all this theory is put to practice and test on small craft around Long Island Sound and New York Bay. One of my good friends in the squadron is Bill Low, '07.

A by-product of my seafaring interest has been the designing of my own Christmas cards along nautical lines.

About once a year I get down to Shreveport, Louisiana, where I see Arthur Nield and have a grand time visiting with him and his delightful family.

I continue to play "at" golf, but still have to break ninety.

ALFRED MORSE BACON

Bacon has never been heard from and his address is unknown.

John Gorham, Nov. 14, 1923.

DIED: New York, N. Y., Sept. 27, 1924.

Bacon's obituary will be found in the Twenty-fifth Anniversary Report.

✠ LAWRENCE GEBHARD BAILEY

MARRIED: Sarah McDonald, Le Mans, France, June 16, 1919.

CHILD: Lawrence Gebhard, Jr., Feb. 12, 1920.

Died: Staten Island, N. Y., Jan. 7, 1936.

Larry Bailey ("Geb" of college days) has come to the end of a long, courageous struggle with the world and his own spirit.

Endowed with a brilliant mind and a burning zeal to write well, he should by some magic have kept at his side those old friends who, even in college days, had often to beguile him from fits of depression. Those friends remained loyal to him always, and he to them. Never, in spite of ill fortune and bad health, did he ask more help than they were glad to give.

RECORDS OF THE CLASS

His war service in France, as liaison officer with the British, and later in Intelligence work with our troops, was a brilliant success, though all one heard were the many funny anecdotes Larry knew how to tell so well.

In his chosen field of writing, teaching and publicity he produced a vast amount of work. It was good, for he always wrestled to bring it up to his own standards. If the strains of the war, and of the great city, finally broke him, let it be remembered that he never admitted defeat.

He leaves a fine son, his namesake, blessed with his father's intelligence, and a personality that foretells a happy life.

Still with the National Association of Wool Manufacturers. I have had to spend a considerable amount of time trying (not always successfully) to prevent too much undesirable legislation during the past five years. It is a little discouraging to find one's self in sympathy with people who, all over the world, are trying to prevent unfortunate things from happening. It would be much more satisfactory to be actively helping to bring about some positive good.

The exigencies of life have smoked me out of the former seclusion of a laboratory and I now find myself busy most of the day with pressing human problems. No one can really be wise enough to be a good doctor. Baldness and greying hairs have landed me on many committees. It happens to all of us. On some, I have taken a liberal and perhaps unpopular stand in the direction, at least, of an open mind toward social and economic experimentation in medicine. This has given me a look into medical politics. It is not a pretty sight.

My professional work continues to be a combination of internal medicine with psychiatry. This suits me well. I am engaged in a piece of research with others on a study of the personalities of patients suffering from high blood pressure. This research is being supported by THE AMERICAN HEART ASSOCIATION through funds contributed by the Josiah Macy, Jr. Foundation.

This year I have occupied the exalted position of Commander of the Willard Straight Post of the American Legion. It is a group mostly of professional men, many of them Harvard graduates, who have been meeting together once a month for the past twenty years to discuss and deliberate on national affairs. We are not too well liked by the Legion because we often find ourselves in disagreement with them.

My hobbies and recreations include the pursuit of perfection in recorded music, the gradual transformation of a New York backyard

Came to Cincinnati in summer of 1937 to begin the work of organizing a new society of priests to do missionary work chiefly in the neglected rural sections of the United States. We have gathered together a small group of priests and students as a nucleus and we have already set to work in our first mission field in Southern Ohio. The work is intended to be national in scope. Other mission areas will be added as our numbers increase. Our society goes by the name of Home Missioners of America. It is under the patronage of the Archbishop of Cincinnati and is incorporated under the laws of Ohio. Present headquarters, 426 E. Fifth Street, Cincinnati.

I haven't very much to add to my last report. I am still working in the New York office of Pacific Mills, where my job includes advertising, public relations, personnel, and market research responsibilities, with enough variety and outside contacts to make me like it as much as ever. I am still hoping that the textile industry in general and the Pacific Mills in particular will bring cheerful smiles to the faces of their many long suffering stockholders, despite Old Deals and New Deals.

I am still having a grand time trying to keep up with all the various sports and hobbies in which I am interested. Cruising and paddle tennis still hold high places and in the last two years I have become an enthusiast on the subject of figure skating, having high hopes of learning how to dance well enough on skates to stop being a constant menace to the life and limb of future Sonja Henies with me and around me. So far as sailing is concerned I have had some fine cruises on my 37-foot yawl Keewaydin, including one last summer to Nova Scotia and back. If any of my cruising classmates haven't heard of "A Cruising Guide to the New England Coast" (edited by R. F. Duncan, 1912), in which I had a small part, or haven't become acquainted with the virtues of the "Plow" anchor, I advise them to steer clear of me, unless they want to get converted.

✠ ROSWELL DOUGLASS BLANDY

UNMARRIED.

DIED: Jan. 1, 1936.

Roswell Douglass Blandy was born in Zanesville, Ohio, on February 27, 1875, the only child of Henry Blandy by his third wife, Ellen Douglass Blandy, of Lowell, Massachusetts. His father, a prominent manufacturer of Zanesville, died in 1879, when his mother and her four-year old son went to live in Plymouth, Mass. Mr. Blandy was educated in the Plymouth schools before attending Harvard with the class of 1910. A few years after leaving college he secured a position in the State Minor Ward Department of Massachusetts, which he held until the time of his death on Jan. 1, 1936. Mr. Blandy remained a bachelor and lived for the most part alone, in a bungalow which he built in Watertown, Mass., where he died. He was a great lover of books, had a wide circle of friends, and also came in contact with many people throughout this country and in England, where his father was born, in the compiling of the genealo-

Mariella, Apr. 8, 1930.

In 1935 I left the Bedford-Rippowam School to go into Junior College work. The work was interesting, but I chose the Junior College badly, for it went bankrupt, and I received no salary. After a year of substituting around Boston, I came here to Vermont Academy, a boarding school in the Vermont Hills. The school has somewhat of a Dartmouth tinge, having a Dartmouth headmaster, but I have managed to keep my integrity, and have enjoyed teaching English, History, and Mathematics. I am keeping in physical trim by coaching Hockey and Track.

My summers are still spent in camp work, at the Luther Gulick Camps, South Casco, Maine, where Mrs. Boyden and I have charge of the little girls' camp, with girls from 7 to 12. With boys in the winter and girls in the summer we manage to keep busy and young. Our oldest daughter is a junior at Wellesley and our second daughter is a junior at Northfield Seminary, but we still have our ten-year old daughter with us.

It might be interesting to add that I had Jack Curtis's son Bill in my English class here two years ago, a very fine boy and a credit to 1910.

MARRIED: Louine Darby, Los Angeles, Calif., Oct. 21, 1919.

Since July 1935, soon after my return from ten years' residence in California, I have been most pleasantly occupied selling Cadillac-LaSalle and Oldsmobile automobiles here in Boston, and trying to figure out why I ever thought the West was superior to the East, as a place to reside. After all, I guess a good Yankee is pretty hard to suit permanently anywhere except in good old New England.

I much enjoy attending all Harvard and many other athletic contests, and for exercise still obtain much pleasure in eighteen holes of golf.

DIED: New York, N. Y., Dec. 18, 1939.

Heywood Broun never forgot that he had been to Harvard. Few of the Class saw him after he left college. All of us read his writings. But as we remember him vividly, lumbering across The Yard, always needing a haircut, necktie askew, a little bit short of time for the distance to be covered for the next lecture, or indoors equally unkempt, whether it was at a poker game or in an argument in which he was taking the side that seemed to have the least support, or in a class room—where he could absorb wisdom easily and exude it occasionally with a brilliantly uncollegiate selection of words—I think it is wise to print the words of one who knew him closely, when he had reached maturity, and I have therefore the permission of the Book of the Month Club to reprint their pamphlet with Christopher Morley's appreciation.

Heywood Broun, one of the five judges of the Book-of-the-Month Club since its inception in 1926, died of pneumonia at the New York Medical Center on December 18th last. He was fifty-one years old.

Few persons realized, until the news was flashed that he was lying desperately ill, how deep and widespread was the public's affection for him. It is doubtful whether, in the last half-century, the demise of any individual in New York has called forth such genuine expressions of loss, from all the myriad groups of occupation and ways of thought, of which the great city is composed.

On the day of his funeral, memorial services were held at Saint Patrick's Cathedral on Fifth Avenue. In a pouring rain literally thousands came to pay Heywood Broun their last respects. The city itself was represented in the person of Fiorella La Guardia, its mayor; the federal government in the person of Supreme Court Justice Felix Frankfurter. There were many other functionaries, but also—as Broun would have liked—the common people, men and women of every conceivable walk of life; newspaper men, authors, theatrical producers, actors, taxi men, café owners and habitués, members of the swanky Racquet Club alongside of foreigners speaking broken English. The sense of a unique personal loss was common to them, and to tens of thousands who were not there.

The New York Times expressed this universal sentiment in an editorial, which—since it represents so precisely the feeling of all of us at the Book-of-the-Month Club—we reprint here: “When he stepped from among his contemporaries yesterday morning, on an assignment from which no ‘It Seems to Me’ will be sent back, he left a space which he alone could fill. No journalistic personality in our time was more distinct. Heywood Broun disagreed with many people, but no one could ever have hated him. He disagreed with himself. He wandered among ideas, never claiming to be consistent. He was consistent only in the qualities that were born in him—in humor, in courage, in endless and painstaking kindness for the poor, the weak and those whom he thought oppressed. He projected these qualities, with candor and amazing skill, into what he wrote.

“He could hit like a sledge-hammer, as he did when he wrote of the trial and execution of Sacco and Vanzetti. He had an unwavering respect for his personal and journalistic independence, and often went out of his way to put his editors and publishers in their places. He never lost his geniality, but as the years passed he became more the crusader, less the professional funny man. Himself one of the glittering successes of journalism, he organized the Newspaper Guild in what publishers as well as newspaper men knew to be a sincere desire on his part to be of use to his more obscure fellow-workers.

“Those who have read his column all these years and have watched him experiment and grow will hardly believe that he won’t be reporting on this new assignment of his, as he did on his exploits at Saratoga and Miami, on life as seen from his home at First and Second Mortgage, Conn., and on the diversity of causes which were always made more human by his touch. They will know, however, that if he could get his copy to press, Heywood Broun would not treat the subject too solemnly. He will be lumbering among the stars, taking notes, looking out for any fellow-wayfarers who may be in trouble, and in some new place there will be an echo of warm-hearted laughter."

BOOK-OF-THE-MONTH CLUB

HARRY SCHERMAN, President

HEYWOOD

BY CHRISTOPHER MORLEY

I think Heywood Broun would have been genuinely shocked by some of the tributes printed after his death; for I believe that in the later months of his life he had begun to achieve a way of thinking and feeling in which Privacy is more important than Publicity. Under the apparently naïf exhibitionism, and a sort of intellectual striptease which was his armor wherein he trusted, there was a deep humility and a terrified search for certainty. He always took an innocent pleasure in being what used to be known as a Man about Town; and little by little he discovered that the Town that is most interesting is the City of God. In that latter no one is pointed out; there is no consciousness of self; there is, one may believe, the blessing of anonymity and forgetfulness.

I always thought of Heywood as a kind of medieval figure; a strolling friar—how much more becoming a brown robe and knotted cord would have been—a sort of huge Santa Claus. He took his simplicity and kindliness into the most disconcerting slums there are—among night clubs and wisecrackers and Racqueteers—and was everywhere beloved for his drollery and devotion. He was overworked (as Santa Claus always will be) wrapping and delivering innumerable parcels of generosity. Anything that looked to him like cruelty or oppression enlisted his immediate and bewildered and chivalrous anger. The medieval and monkish flavor of his mind was best shown in his love of fables, parables, allegories. Even his love of his hobby, painting, was evidence of that. In a different age he would have been enormously happy coloring rubrics and fanciful bright vignettes on old vellum chronicles. When in 1921 I reprinted his beautiful and satirical little fairy tale The Fifty-First Dragon in an anthology of contemporary essays, I said "Heywood Broun is likely, in the next ten or fifteen years, to do as fine work, both imaginative and critical, as any American of his era."

This, in occasional flashing sword-strokes, came to pass; but not as often as one hoped. His profession as daily columnist, his preoccupation as crusader for various causes, his diffusion among sociable and generous concerns, increased the temperamental dispersiveness of his mind. He was too humane, too genuinely interested in people, for the savage concentration required by art. His mind, I used to think, was sometimes as disorderly as his person. When he measured himself against anything precise, lucid, articulated, he was likely to fumble. The elementary French grammar that flunked him at Harvard was perhaps symbolic. But where powers of intuition and observation were concerned, whether in poker or politics, he became wise and efficient. Those of us who are relatively average in body or bearing can scarcely guess the handicap imposed upon a mind incarnated in such a conspicuous figure. That beefy and kindly bosom was the broad battleground of the most militant complexes, where opposing troops struggled in briars and thickets. It was surely this, in part, that drove our friend to so many chivalries at once.

Beneath that partly guileful naïveté there was great wisdom and shrewdness in Heywood, and humor of most endearing ricochet. His unshockable tolerance, his sympathy with all kinds of creative experiment, were of the greatest service in our Book of the Month Club meetings—where he never once (in nearly 14 years) arrived on time. This, he said, was to avoid eating too much at the lunch table; but he always ate as much dessert as he could lay hands on; especially raspberry ice cream. In an age increasingly machined and regimented Heywood was an invaluable liaison officer, or commuter, between two worlds, the Flesh and the Spirit; the Serious and the Merry. Few of us will ever know anyone who had more of both. Two of the best things he ever wrote—in his habit of baring his bosom to the moon—were his obituary tributes to Ruth Hale and to his father. In the latter he suggested as a final inscription, He took and gave much joy in life. This may well be his own.

A MESSAGE FROM PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT

"Heywood Broun lived a full life and leaves a noble heritage. His great gifts of heart and mind and soul were ever directed toward his purposes. Neither slander nor calumny nor thought of personal consequences ever deterred him once he had entered a fight in the cause of right and justice as he saw it. He was a hard fighter but always a fair adversary and no matter for whom he worked, he wore no man's collar. He will be missed and mourned particularly by the underprivileged, whose staunch champion he always was."

MARRIED: Phyllis Baldwin, Mt. Kisco, N. Y., May 20, 1925 (divorced, Sept., 1929).

The five years that have passed since our 25th Reunion have been quieter ones for me than their predecessors, insofar, at least, as business activities are concerned. Because of a conflict of interest, as defined by banking regulations, between my connections with the City Bank Farmers Trust Company (New York) and the banking firm of White, Weld & Co., I retired in 1938 as a special partner of the latter firm. My principal business occupation is, therefore, as an active director and member of various Committees of the Trust Company. Since that Company has one of the largest Trust businesses of any trust company in the country, the problems of management and administration of the property under its supervision have been varied and absorbing. I am also serving on the Boards of certain other companies which are connected with finance or the oil industry.

My recreations remain quite orthodox and unexciting: a bit of golf when time and weather permit, an occasional evening of bridge with not too exacting friends, and other such useless but still harmless diversions from the grim realities of life. My hobbies include a carpenter shop, and an endless amount of day-dreaming about the acquisition of a small farm somewhere, far removed from the marts of trade.

Bob Burlingham was born in New York, February 29, 1889, the son of Charles C. Burlingham, Harvard '79, and Louisa W. (Lawrence) Burlingham.

RECORDS OF THE CLASS

He prepared for college at Middlesex School, Concord, Massachusetts, and entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons, New York the autumn following graduation from college. During the summer of his third year in medical school he showed his keen interest in his work by serving as surgical intern at Ancon Hospital, Canal Zone. Immediately after graduation in 1914 he became a medical intern at Roosevelt Hospital, New York, where he served a two year internship. Upon graduation from Roosevelt Hospital he entered actively into his life work, and from 1916 to 1918 in addition to the practice of medicine he served as instructor in Medicine, and as assistant in Clinical Pathology at the College of Physicians and Surgeons, and assistant physician to the Volunteer Hospital. He also served as contract surgeon, U. S. Army on the Tuberculosis Examining Board, and as a member of the Medical Advisory Board for the Selective Service Act.

It is apparent from the above record that Bob was recognized by the faculty of his medical school as one of their outstanding graduates, for his active teaching started immediately following his graduation when he was appointed instructor in Medicine, and his services were immediately utilized by the U. S. Government on two Examining Boards as we entered the World War. He soon received his commission as first lieutenant, Medical Reserve Corps, U. S. Army, and from 1918 to 1919 was on duty in the Cardio-Vascular Department at Hazelhurst Field, Mineola, L. I., N. Y.

At the end of the World War he entered the practice of medicine in New York and became a member of the staff of the Reconstruction Hospital. It was during these years from 1921 to 1922 that his continuing interest in scientific medicine led him permanently into a career of research which began in 1922 with several years work in the Department of Biology, Williams College, Williamstown, Massachusetts. From 1927 to 1930 he served in the Department of Pathology, Albany City Hospital and Medical College, leaving temporarily for postgraduate study in Budapest, Hungary during 1928. From 1932 to 1934 he was Assistant in Pathology, Cornell Medical College, New York. He became Curator of the Pathological Museum in 1937.

On September 24, 1914, Bob married Dorothy Trimble Tiffany at Cold Spring Harbor, New York. His four children were all born in New York City. Robert, Jr., born August 29, 1915, after studying in Vienna spent three years in Antioch College, and one year at Harvard. He then returned to Vienna where he took up architecture, continuing his studies in the London School of Architecture, and is now at Columbia. His older daughter, Mary Tiffany, born May 1, 1917, also studied architecture in Vienna. She was married May 8, 1938, to Simon Schmiderer, a young Austrian architect. They are now living in New York. Katrina Ely, born March 27, 1919, spent two years at Bennington College, and studied industrial designing in London. She too is now in New York. Michael, born March 16, 1921, is a sophomore in the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

When Bob's tragic death occurred on May 28, 1938, the letters that poured in gave eloquent testimony that there were many entirely unknown to his family who liked and admired him. Unusually charming, he had an elusive quality which gave everyone an instinctive liking for him. It was as natural for him to be a gentleman as it was to breathe. One recalls his diffident manner and quiet smile, and the ease and repose of conversation with him; his gratitude, out of proportion for small favors done, his unfailing kindness; the fact that he never hurt anyone. These are negative qualities, but Bob was not negative. One thinks of him as a friend, but when alive we took him for granted, and only when he was dead we realized the gap that his absence made for the living. He was unusually sensitive to the feelings of those around him, and yearned for love from his family and friends. If his nature had been less sensitive he might have adjusted himself to the realities, and found a new way of life. His courage was superb and hid his sufferings from the world.

One of his classmates has said that whenever you met him you felt instinctively that something indescribable but rare and beautiful had touched your life. He was incapable of hurting, perhaps from an innate sympathy and respect for other personalities, and his gratitude seemed to be a reflection of the kindness which he inspired in other people. Perhaps this gives some of the reasons for the vividness with which I recall him. His face is before me as I write as if I had seen him only yesterday.

Sylvia, July 1, 1920.

The developments at the mill in Putnam, Connecticut, where I was laboring in 1935 proceeded satisfactorily, but competition from a lower cost rival method finally shut out our market and we were forced to close down. Some of the equipment was sold and we moved the remainder to South Boston where we have since been trying to develop a new process in connection with the processing of synthetic fibres. Our outlook for success is better now than at any time and we have high hopes for the future.

Although I miss the great open spaces which were enjoyed at the Connecticut countryside, I am back home again in Brookline where I have lived the greater part of the time since early school days. But the opportunities for golf are not so prevalent in the larger centers. In the country we could be on the first tee, during the daylight saving season, soon after five o'clock in the afternoon.

My family, it seems, grew quite fond of the country (except, perhaps, for the three or four winter months) and the great objective, at present, is a small retiring place in the country, but not too far from the salt water.

Richmond Peters, Sept. 23, 1918, Harvard '40.

Benjamin Munroe, May 20, 1922.

The past five years have largely been devoted to growing older, watching my children grow up, and the usual round of daily work. I must confess that I feel quite aged with one son married, another about to graduate from Harvard College, and a third in the second class at Milton Academy. However, the old man still finds that he can take care of himself most of the time.

The only real change that I find is that life is somewhat more full of things to do, more varied interests and, naturally, increasing responsibilities. However, there seem to be compensations and I really think that I have enjoyed the past five years as much as any five that I have ever spent, in spite of having to face the repercussions of national problems which I little thought would ever arise.

Outside of my family and my business my chief interest today lies in exerting every effort to keep the United States from being involved in another European war. My reason for this determination is that although I have no doubt that we could win the war, I am very sure that we could not win the peace! Moreover, if the future of this country hangs on such a slender thread that it depends upon our being intimately involved in the problems of Europe, then the foundations on which our country rests are so uncertain that we might as well crawl into our cellars and prepare for the worst, instead of walking out to face the future that will certainly be our destiny if we are guided by wisdom and experience, instead of knowledge and passion. In connection with foreign affairs, little can be added, in so far as we are concerned, to Washington's Farewell Address and the Monroe Doctrine.

As usual I report hobbies and recreations unchanged, and as yet no honors and no publications. In addition to being a partner of Lazard Freres & Co. and a member of the New York State Banking Board, I am director of the following corporations: Associated Dry Goods Corporation, Aztec Land and Cattle Company, Limited, General American Investors Company, Inc., Hahne & Company, James McCreery & Company, Lord & Taylor, Pecos Valley Southern Railway Company, Purity Bakeries Corporation, Texas and Pacific Railway Company, Texas Pacific Land Trust (trustee).

CHILDREN: Robert Hatfield, Nov. 5, 1915, Harvard '38.

Sonia Hatfield, Feb. 20, 1920, Sarah Lawrence '42.

I've taken up skiing in my old age with fair results. No bones broken yet. Linked Christies might be worse.

I've done a lot of travelling around North America, lecturing, and collecting material for books and articles.

Since 1935 I have written: "Government in Business," Macmillan, 1935; "Rich Land Poor Land," Whittlesey House, 1936; "The Tyranny of Words," Harcourt Brace, 1938; "The New Western Front," Harcourt Brace, 1939.

I have acted as consulting economist to the National Resources Committee, the T.V.A., the Resettlement Administration and the SEC.

Despite this New Dealish record, in a way I would like to see the Republicans elect a president in 1940. It ought to be very educational. Then we might all get together to solve our national problems, which are very grave.

Helen Jackson, Jan. 20, 1918, Bryn Mawr, '40.

John Candler, July 8, 1919, Harvard '41.

During the last five years I have organized a psychiatric research and teaching unit at the Massachusetts General Hospital and have been running this with an especial emphasis on the investigation, diagnosis and treatment of nervous symptoms that appear in the guise of medical disorders,—in other words, “neurosis.” This unit is supported by grants to Harvard University by the Rockefeller Foundation. I have written one book, “A Preface to Nervous Disease,” which appeared in June, 1936. Besides that I have written with my colleagues a number of papers on circulation of the brain, the effects of emotion on the human organism and clinical aspects of the psychoneuroses. This year I am president of the American Branch of the International League against Epilepsy; president of the American Association of Neuropathologists; and have been appointed president of the Association for Research in Nervous and Mental Disease for next year.

✠ JOSEPH RANDOLPH COOLIDGE, 3d

MARRIED: Anna Lyman Cabot, Boston, Mass., July 30, 1913.

CHILDREN: Julia, Mar. 8, 1914.

Joseph Randolph, 4th. Feb. 17, 1916.

DIED: Squam Lake, N. H., Sept. 23, 1936.

Joseph Randolph Coolidge, III, was born in Boston, and closely related by blood to the families then inhabiting the Back Bay. He was the eldest of eight children, and grew up in a household characterized by simplicity and the best New England tradition. At the age of twelve he entered the First Form at Groton in September, 1900.

He was an intense little boy, interested in Indians and hunting and fishing; and the immense social pressures of the school were ineffective to change him. He was not scornful of competitive sports; he was simply indifferent, except where they fitted into the life he liked. He was willing to run the mile, because it had an obvious connection with wood trails and a hunter's life; and he did this so well as to win the mile run in the Freshman Meet with Yale in 1907. But his heart was in the highlands of New Hampshire; and when he could, he went up to Squam Lake to fish, and paddle a canoe, and listen to the loons in the evening, and watch the sun rise over the mountains.

He was his own frame of reference. What concerned him or his friends received his entire attention, and he pursued his objectives with an intensity which was disconcerting. It was nothing to him if a man were charming or talented. He asked only for sincerity, and was himself so true that he commanded loyalty from many who must have marvelled at themselves.

This conduct of life has disadvantages. He missed the nuances of sophisticated social intercourse and the various amusing interludes which go to make life endurable, but he was never bedevilled with anxiety over what anyone else thought of him; and he bound his friends to him with hoops of steel.

He became a forester. He could go into a stand of timber, and come out three days later and tell how many feet of lumber could there be got. He could find his way in the woods, cook his food, carry his canoe, and shelter himself as well as any guide in Maine. He knew lumber, its uses, markets, and prices. He invented processes of wood treatment and preservation. He made a living—and a good one.

The nature of his calling tended to break the contacts with his earliest friends, and most of these remember him as he was in college. He used to have strange weaknesses for getting dressed in white flannels and then climbing a tree; or for playing chess with outlandish experts; or for turning up at somebody's country house at three in the morning without notice. He never was completely domesticated. He had, however, an astounding talent for getting men together and making them do things that never would have occurred to them in ordinary course. He was a catalyst. Devoid of self-consciousness and filled with energy and enthusiasm, he brought to consummation projects which more sophisticated men would have hesitated to undertake. Thus, he collected eight class-mates and insisted they room together in Apthorp House—which, to their own mild surprise, they did.

Joe married a gentle and wholly competent lady who completely understood him. When he was weary, or discouraged, or his restless spirit had driven him into the wilderness, she led him beside the still waters, and restored his soul. Where he went, she went; and his friends were her friends.

He died at Squam Lake of cancer on September 23, 1936, in his forty-ninth year.

Write it down that his strength was as the strength of ten, because his heart was pure.

OCCUPATION: Writer, McCann-Erickson, Inc., Detroit, Michigan.

HOME ADDRESS: 235 Old Army Road, Scarsdale, N. Y.

MARRIED: Margaret Goodwin, Swarthmore, Pa., July 9, 1921.

During the past five years I have made two trips to Europe and three trips to South America. In South America I have been particularly interested in getting back from the centers of population into the undeveloped interiors of Venezuela, Colombia, Ecuador, Peru and Brazil. Nowhere in the world have I seen such vast areas awaiting settlement and development. I have also studied firsthand the expropriation policy in Mexico, and the attempt to spread it through other parts of Latin America. I wrote on this subject in "The Inside Story," published by Prentice Hall, 1940; a book in which I collaborated with 20 fellow members of the Overseas Press Club.

Late in 1939 I became associated with the McCann-Erickson agency and now make my headquarters at the company's Detroit office.

June 1937: Graduated from the Philadelphia College of Osteopathy with degree of Doctor of Osteopathy; and elected to membership in Sigma Alpha Omicron Honorary Fraternity.

HARVARD CLASS OF 1910

July 1937: Licensed by the State Board of Medical Examiners of New Jersey to practice osteopathy.

Sept 1937: Opened office for practice of osteopathy in Summit, New Jersey.

Oct. 1937 to Oct. 1939: Graduate work in Pharmacology, Therapeutics and Surgery.

Nov. 1939: Licensed by the State Board of Medical Examiners of New Jersey to practice medicine and surgery.

During the current academic year I hold a temporary part time appointment at the Philadelphia College of Osteopathy where I am engaged in research and teaching.

By transferring my occupation from that of engineering and building construction to that of physician I have fulfilled a life long desire. Now the additional opportunity to engage in research and teaching satisfies another deeply rooted urge, and I find myself at 52 with a new and fascinating field of endeavor opening before me.

Hobbies and recreation: Reading, music (listening), target shooting with a 22 calibre rifle.

HOME ADDRESS: 172 Standish Rd., Watertown, Mass.

RECORDS OF THE CLASS

MARRIED: Elizabeth Edson Pierce, Brooklyn, N. Y., Nov. 4, 1916 (died Mar. 21, 1924).

The last five years have been completely centered in my family. Three of the five members of our household belonged to the older generation and they became invalids in these years. The circumstances were such that it became my privilege to care for them. It was very confining and exhausting and involved continuous twenty four hour duty, from the drain of which I am now endeavoring to recover. The deaths of the three occurred on the following dates. My father died on July 7, 1938, my aunt—Mother's sister—died on March 26, 1939 and my mother died on June 15, 1939, thus completely eliminating the oldest generation from our family.

FREDERICK MONROE DE SELDING

CARROLL DUNHAM, 3d

OCCUPATION: Banker (private), stockholder and trustee, 63 Wall St., New York, N. Y.

HOME ADDRESS: 50 Cedarhurst Ave., Cedarhurst, Long Island, N. Y.

MARRIED: Ruth Harper Pilling, Blue Ridge Summit, Pa., Sept. 25, 1915.

CHILDREN: Angela Scoville, Sept. 28, 1917.

Carroll, 4th, Mar. 3, 1919.

Peter, May 3, 1921.

There is nothing important to report in the last five years except a continuing struggle with an ever changing and strange world. My oldest son has been at work for a year and my younger is in his freshman year at Harvard and seems to be liking it. I am spending part of each winter in Florida, partly for pleasure and partly because after a heart attack a couple of years ago, cold weather does not agree any too well. Retired from partnership in my firm a year ago last October on account of bad health but still maintain my old connection.

WILLIAM BULLARD DURANT

OCCUPATION: Manufacturer—canned foods, 85 Walnut St., Watertown, Mass.

✠ STANLEY BRUCE ELWELL

MARRIED: Gladys Grey Hildreth, Harvard, Mass., Oct. 10, 1917.

CHILD: Robert Bruce (adopted), Dec. 13, 1930.

DIED: Oct. 3, 1936.

Stanley Bruce Elwell passed on on his fiftieth birthday. With his twin brother, Alcott F. Elwell, he had been climbing Stinson Mountain, one of the southwestern foothills of the White Mountains, and was almost at the foot when he was overcome by a heart attack and died immediately.

HARVARD CLASS OF 1910

He was born in Cambridge, October 3, 1886, prepared for college at Stone School, later receiving the degree of Bachelor of Science and Architecture from Cornell in 1914. With the exception of the period of his war service, he had practiced architecture continuously since that time.

His War Service began with the National Guard at the time of the Mexican incident. He was put on recruiting duty, and did not get to the Border. In May 1917, he went to Plattsburg as first lieutenant in the Reserve Corps, having previously taken the examinations. In August he was commissioned captain and assigned to Company C, 301 Ammunition Train, with which he went overseas July, 1918. He served with the 76th Division at Charenton and St. Amand Montrond (Cher) August 11, 1918 to November 10, 1918. At the end of the year he was transferred to the command of Co. C., 116th Ammunition Train, 41st Division, and with that company returned to New York at the end of February, 1919, where he was discharged.

On October 20, 1917, he married Gladys Gray Hildreth at Harvard, Massachusetts, and thereafter maintained a summer home in that town in which he became interested. He had been for a number of years commander of the local post of the American Legion. He also had a house at Cambridge and showed his feeling of responsibility towards his native city by holding a position on the Board of Managers of the Cambridge Y.M.C.A. for many years.

He had two particular hobbies; the first, anything that had to do with outdoor life; the second, firearms; and he was particularly happy when these could be combined, as he said in his 25th Report on "an occasional trip in the woods with a gun and congenial companions". It was natural that his varied interests led him to join with others of like interest, and so he became a member of the American Institute of Architects, the Massachusetts Rifle Association, The National Rifle Association, and for the purely social side—The Boston City Club and Charity Lodge A. F. & A. M. of Cambridge. He himself was a very charming companion, full of controlled enthusiasms, cheerful in his attitude towards his recreations and cheerfully earnest towards his work.

He died in a singularly appropriate manner—in the country that he loved, he was participating in a recreation that he loved, at the time of year when that country was at its glorious best—

RECORDS OF THE CLASS

“E’en as he trod that day with God so walked he from his birth
In simpleness and gentleness and honor and clean mirth”
He is survived by his widow and by a young son whom they adopted in 1930.

Same job, same activities, hobbies, recreations. No new books since last report—just a few magazine articles, another magazine on my hands now—Outdoors, in the adult sporting field.

At the moment of writing this, I'm a temporary cripple, having grown old disgracefully by breaking my leg skiing.

LEMIST ESLER

OCCUPATION: Rancher and writer, Folded Hills Ranch, Gaviota, Calif.

HOME ADDRESS: Folded Hills Ranch, Gaviota, Calif.

MARRIED: Jane Garmany Kemp, New York, N. Y., April 21, 1921.

CHILD: Juliet T. Kemp (step-daughter), July 26, 1912.

I like to say, "I told you so!" Well, here we are, riding (leather), and just about staying with, the avalanche I got gloomy about in our 25th joke-book. And, boys, old Avalanche is just beginning to buck. And I can't see any pick-up men around—I wish to God I could!—to lift us off when he really gets going, like they do in well organized rodeos. So I hope you've all picked good places to land.

Me? Five years ago I started looking for one. I wanted five acres in the desert. I got three hundred acres in the hills. They are the most beautiful three hundred acres in the world. They are self-contained but for a refrigerating plant and machine-gun emplacements; those are next on the program. Any 'ioer who wants to help me operate them will be welcomed.*

I raise from five to ten thousand turkeys a year, the ten thousand during the years in which the market is the worst. Alfalfa and grain are the principal crops. There are a few milch cows around and a few sheep. I'm going in more heavily for the latter. There are also deer, bob-cats, wild hogs, coyotes and mountain lions, but I do not raise them.

Mrs. Esler breeds thoroughbred English running horses, commonly known as race horses.

* The machine-guns will be trained, not upon any particular class, but upon chaos in general.

JOSEPH BENEDICT ESTABROOK

OCCUPATION: Consulting engineer (sanitary municipal), 521 Sexton Bldg., Minneapolis, Minn.

HOME ADDRESS: 4615 East Lake Harriet Blvd., Minneapolis, Minn.

MARRIED: Madge Robinson, Minneapolis, Minn., Dec. 25, 1916.

A record of my doings for the past five years would, I fear, add little to the interest and glamour of the ponderous tome which sets forth the achievements and triumphs of my classmates of the glorious class of 1910. The same activities, the same business and personal relationships seem to go along with the late forties and early fifties as were the case in thirties and early forties and therefore a record of the past five years is a continuation in a less staccato strain of the history written in the 25th annual report.

HARVARD CLASS OF 1910

The writer is still a consulting sanitary engineer and has fortunately been kept busy during the period of curtailed business activity, planning projects designed to provide work for the less fortunate. The only event which has in any way changed the even tenor of middle age was that, due to the recession, the doctors felt that they needed additional clinical material and decided to rearrange all of the plumbing in the interior of the writer to such an extent that many former hobbies such as golf, tennis, hunting, etc., are now denied. This however is not an unalloyed disaster as it gives much more time for retrospection and creates within one a philosophy and outlook which is much less wearing than the old one.

The fact is that there is no history and no major change in my work or in my family and so there can be no occasion for a class history. I sincerely hope, however, that these remarks do not sound too gloomy as that is far from being either my characteristic or present state of mind.

RICHARD MATHER EVERETT

OCCUPATION: Manager industrial fabrics dept., Pacific Mills (textiles), 78 Chauncy St., Boston, Mass.

HOME ADDRESS: Old Colony Hill, Hingham, Mass.

MARRIED: Madeleine Weeks (Howard), Nantucket, Mass., July 15, 1922.

CHILDREN: Richard Mather, Jr., Jan. 31, 1925.

William Spencer Howard, 2d (step-son), June 24, 1916.

During the last five years since my Twenty-fifth Reunion report there have been no major changes in my family or business life.

I am still manager of the Industrial Fabrics Department of Pacific Mills, and my family and I still live in Hingham, Massachusetts, except during the summer which we spend at Nantucket.

In addition to business activities I have during the last few years served as a vestryman and junior warden of St. John the Evangelist Church, Hingham, and I continue as a director of the Webster & Atlas National Bank of Boston.

ALBERT PAINE EVERTS

OCCUPATION: Investment banking and brokerage, 24 Federal St., Boston, Mass.

HOME ADDRESS: 114 Kirkstall Rd., Newtonville, Mass.

MARRIED: Fannie Foster Tower, Pepperell, Mass., Apr. 24, 1915.

CHILDREN: Carolyn, Feb. 25, 1918, Mt. Holyoke '39, married James Angus Stewart, Amherst '40.

Albert Paine, July 18, 1921.

Nelson Tower, May 5, 1926.

My business activities are still with Paine, Webber & Co. where I have been since graduation from college.

In 1938 and 1939 was the New England governor of the National Assoc. of Security Dealers.

Made a brief trip (my first) to France and England in the summer of 1937.

My exercise is still obtained through tennis and golf, but I am less and less in demand as a partner in both sports.

Have never been particularly interested in local politics, but in a weak moment decided to run for alderman in the city of Newton. Am now serving my third year and on the whole find it interesting work.

On board of trustees of the Roxbury Latin School.

DIED: Hartsdale, N. Y., Sept. 26, 1939.

On September 26, 1939, the final call came to Francis I. Fallon at his home in Hartsdale, New York. His life had always been such that no matter when the summons came he was prepared, but there was time enough given for him to receive the rites of the church of which he had been a devout member since birth.

Receiving his preparatory education in the public schools of Boston, where he was born, he received his A.B. degree with the class of 1910 and his LL.B. from the Law School in 1912. Commissioned in the Aviation Corps of the Army during the World War, at its conclusion he entered the practice of his profession in New York City, wherein he was eminently successful.

RECORDS OF THE CLASS

Naturally shy and modest, he remained through life a guileless boy at heart. To those to whom he gave his friendship he ever remained true with a steadfastness that nothing could shake. Grief at his passing is softened somewhat by a sense of gratitude for the privilege of his friendship.

He left a devoted wife and a splendid family of eight children besides three brothers and two sisters.

DIED: Portland, Me., Sept. 5, 1937.

Edward Parris Farwell was born October 20, 1887, the son of the Rev. Parris Thaxter Farwell and Margaret Cushing Loring, then settled in Stockbridge. He prepared for college at Wellesley High School and received his degree in regular course in 1910. During his college years he assumed that he would enter the ministry and did in fact attend Chicago Theological Seminary for one year, but gave it up and entered business life in the employ of the Babson Statistical Organization. This training was the ground work for his later life, for in 1924 he became the first investment counsellor in Chicago and in that business he remained. He was particularly fitted for it through his personality as well as through his business training. He was very fond of people, he was instinctively good and honest and he drew to himself, as a person as well as a business adviser, a large circle of clients. His distinguished mind and his definitely social attributes made him make friends easily and hold them.

In Winnetka, where he lived for many years, he took part in the affairs of the Church and in other civic activities. He was always a very loyal member of the Class and of Harvard, although his distance from Cambridge made it hard for him to demonstrate this by attendance at Reunions.

He died at Portland, Maine, near where he had been living for the summer, on September 5, 1937, after an illness of several months.

He is survived by his wife, Elizabeth Farwell Farwell and two sons, Loring Chapman, a graduate of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and Robert Lawrence, now a student at Harvard.

Jean Louise, Aug. 28, 1922.

Still in the insurance business. During the last five years I have taken more active interest in the trade organizations connected with this business. For two years was president of Insurance Board of St. Louis and am now on executive committee of State Association, Insurance Institute and Insurance Council of Missouri. Publications have been reports and speeches along these lines. Have also spent considerable time in charity organizations; now on board of Mid-West Council of American Youth Hostels and president of Camp Wyman, a United Charities enterprise. Music remains my principal hobby, but recreations are toned down to the non-strenuous.

I am still connected with the Stone Truck Equipment Co. who are distributors for The Highway Trailer Co. of Edgerton, Wisconsin, manufacturers of commercial trailers and many kinds of public utility equipment. Since the last report we have moved from South Boston to Allston, Mass.

Our children are both in college. Janet is now a junior at Wellesley specializing in languages and hoping that the present war will not interfere with her future use of them.

Kendall, believe it or not, is a freshman at Brown University, his own choice. He has made up his mind to become a naval architect, but before going to Mass. Technology to take up that study, he wanted to go to a small college. I hope he may yet be at Harvard, perhaps in the graduate school.

Golf, swimming and sailing are now my only recreations. Boats and boating are and I guess always will be my chief hobbies.

In the past five years I have continued my work as a teacher of literature and as director of the School of Letters, University of Iowa. I have gone forth to give addresses before educational organizations when no alibi was handy, and have published two books, "The American State University" (Univ. of N. Carolina Press) and "The Future of the Liberal College" (Appleton-Century).

My hobby is to try to rediscover forgotten truth, and my recreation to present my findings irritatingly on all occasions. One such Family affairs and outside interests caused me to withdraw from Jackson & Curtis as an active partner in January, 1936 and to sever my connections entirely in May, 1938.

My father died in June, 1939—a great loss to me and, I think, to the community as well. I am proud to have been asked to succeed him as president of the Trustees of Donations to the Protestant Episcopal Church, trustee of the Boston Museum of Fine Arts and as a director of the American Telephone & Telegraph Company and General Electric Company.

Here is hoping that there will be a big turnout of classmates and their wives for the 30th Reunion and that the same wonderful spirit so manifest at the 25th will continue as long as there are any of us left to attend Reunions.

✠ WILLIAM WALLACE GARDNER

MARRIED: Helen Requa Bassett, Los Angeles, Calif., July 20, 1916.

CHILDREN: Helen, Dec. 29, 1917, Univ. of California '39.

Carol, Sept. 1, 1921, Los Angeles City College '43.

DIED: Los Angeles, Calif., 1940.

William Wallace Gardner was a typical Californian, meaning that he came from New England, where he was born in Northampton, Massachusetts, through various stopping places on the way, to Los Angeles—where he made his home and where his life work was centered.

We all remember him in college as a pleasant, cheerful, studious person. He was in college for the full four years and graduated cum laude. In the Senior Year he won a James Gordon Bennett prize with a paper called "The American Aluminum Industry." Upon graduation he started to learn the merchandising business in Boston, but this lasted only for a short time, when he was lured to Texas by advertisements spelling out the future of the Citrus Industry. The night he arrived in Texas, that state had one of its rare freezes, which had the same effect on his enthusiasm for the Citrus Industry that it did on that industry itself.

Another thing that we remember about him was that he was one of our largest classmates physically, but a spell in the Louisiana oil fields sufficed to reduce him by some seventy pounds, such an exciting change that he found it worthy of report on one of his earlier contributions to the Class Books.

In the Fall of 1911, he went to Los Angeles and settled there, working for a short time in a small manufacturing concern, but almost immediately going into land development and associated real estate ventures, and in this work he remained practically all the time for the rest of his life. He never returned to any of the Class Reunions, but remained a very interested and loyal alumnus.

In 1916, he married Helen R. Bassett at Los Angeles and they had two daughters: Helen, who graduated from the University of California at Los Angeles in 1939, and Carol—a student at Los Angeles City College, Class of 1943—who with Mrs. Gardner survive him.

✠ ISAAC GOLDBERG

MARRIED: Elsie Frieda Horvick, Brooklyn, N. Y., Sept. 6, 1914.

DIED: Brookline, Mass., July 14, 1938.

In the twenty-fifth anniversary report of the Class of 1910 Isaac Goldberg wrote, "It is strange that most, not all, of course, of my writing since being graduated from college has been done in fields in which I did not specialize. In college I took no courses in music (except as an outsider) or drama; certainly I took no courses in sexology . . ." Yet he wrote at length, discriminatingly and zestfully not only in these fields, but in many others, as appears from the appended list of his works and the brief summary of his other numerous and varied literary activities.

He had not meant to be a writer. Having specialized in Romance Philology, he had planned, in the usual way, to impart his knowledge to others by going into teaching. But aside from serving in 1931 and 1932 as special lecturer on Hispano-American Literature at Harvard he made his way not as a teacher but as a writer.

The change in direction came when, fresh from college, Goldberg made a chance connection with the Boston Evening Transcript, for which his linguistic knowledge "came in very handy" (as Goldberg put it idiomatically) because of the confused international situation and the First European War. Goldberg did a considerable amount of book-reviewing and, for H. T. Parker, writing about both drama and music. The free-lance connection with the Transcript persisted almost until the time of Goldberg's death. It was nourished and strengthened by the mutual admiration of Goldberg and Parker. Goldberg learned from Parker and was influenced by him, to the extent that one strong personality can be influenced by another. Similarly the Roxbury Jew, devoted to knowledge and things of the spirit with a Talmudic passion, had his effect on the brilliant, erratic moulder of neo-Addisonian prose.

The intensity of Goldberg's learning may readily be traced to his Jewish heritage. (Characteristically, Goldberg, not a practicing Jew, would almost defiantly assert his Jewishness when Jewishness was under attack.) The breadth of his culture, the enormous variety of his interests, on the other hand, marked him as an exceptional man. A glance at the list of his publications discloses a remarkable mind, which could jump quickly, lightly and surely from Gilbert and Sullivan (words and music) to Spanish-American literature; from authoritative biography to sexology and studies in psychology; from Tin Pan Alley to the history of a courtesan; from a study of the language of music to a study of the language of words. A man who did so much writing and who lived by his pen varied inevitably in the quality of his writing. Sometimes it might have been termed the writing of a journeyman, though of a brilliant and always honest journeyman. But the astonishing thing was that amid such quantity the quality should have been so prevailingly high. In some cases, furthermore, like Gilbert and Sullivan and (I am informed) Latin-American literature, it is an authoritative as well as a brilliant and stimulating pen that is at work.

Those who knew him, however, found him even more remarkable as a person than as a writer. In another place and on another occasion I attempted to describe the mark he made on his friends. I hope I may be forgiven for repeating some of those words now:

“To know Ike Goldberg was to experience intensely those qualities in his writings which had a marked influence on the culture of his time and scene and by which he will be remembered. He was a courageous, zestful, remarkably well-informed and singularly uninhibited critic—in the fullest meaning of that word—of life and the arts. He could no more separate life from art than from physiological functions. For him, indeed, art was a function of living, and living was an art. . .

“His enormous culture, covering an almost infinite variety of fields, had vitality. There was nothing fake or pseudo or dilletantish about it. He knew how to extract the full savor from his cultural pursuits, but he was never the intellectual or aesthetic gourmet. Whatever he did and whatever he knew seemed to have been related to the rest in his consciousness. He was a full man in the Baconian sense . . .

“Because he had neither the taste nor the talent for conventional effusiveness he seemed, on first acquaintance, a man difficult to get to know. Actually one soon discovered that the path to his heart and brain was direct. For he was interested in the substance of knowledge and of friendship and of the things by which he set store, not in superficialities or mannerisms. He despised pretense and was impatient with non-entity. But he had the soul of democrat.”

HARVARD CLASS OF 1910

PUBLICATIONS: "Sir William S. Gilbert—A Study in Modern Satire and the Gilbert-Sullivan Operas"; "Studies in Spanish-American Literature"; "Brazilian Literature"; "The Drama of Transition"; "The Man Mencken"; "Havelock Ellis"; "The Theatre of George Jean Nathan"; "Panorama—A Book of Critical Sexual and Aesthetic Views" (monograph); "The Sexual Life of Man, Woman and Child" (monograph); "The Story of Gilbert and Sullivan"; "The Fine Art of Living"; "Tin Pan Alley"; "Sexarians" (short stories); "George Gershwin"; "Madame Sex" (short stories); "The German Jew—His Share in Modern Culture" (in collaboration with Dr. Abraham Myerson); "Queen of Hearts—Life and Loves of Lola Montez"; "Studies in Yiddish Literature"; "Mordecai Manuel Noah"; "The Wonder of Words"; "From Ragtime to Swingtime."

In addition Goldberg wrote a long series of monographs in the Haldeman-Julius Blue Book Series; made numerous translations of plays, novels, tales and criticism from Yiddish, Spanish, French, German, Italian and Portugese; was staff reviewer of music and books on music on the American Mercury, 1930–32, contributor to Collier's "New National Encyclopaedia and to magazines, and was the editor and founder of "Panorama", which enjoyed a lively if not extended existence as a monthly survey of people and ideas.

There is a privately published monograph, "Isaac Goldberg—An Appreciation", by Allen Crandall.

DIED: Boston, Mass., Jan. 4, 1938.

RECORDS OF THE CLASS

Arthur T. Good prepared for college at Boston Latin School and was graduated from that school in 1906. He attended Harvard College and Harvard Law School, receiving the degree of A.B. with the Class of 1910 and the degree of LL.B. in 1912.

After his admission to the bar in 1912, he practiced law in Boston in association with Danforth W. Comins.

Even prior to leaving College he was active in military affairs, as a member of the First Corps Cadets. He enlisted at the outbreak of the War and served overseas as sergeant, first class, with the 101st Engineers. After his return to the United States he was elected national president of the Yankee Division Veterans' Association.

He died January 4, 1938, leaving a widow, Rose M., and two children, Marie Louise and Rose Mary. A simple, earnest man, his life was marked by a steadfast devotion to his country and his family.

HARVARD CLASS OF 1910

CHILDREN: Gavin, Jr., June 26, 1915, Harvard '38.

Arthur Lloyd, Mar. 14, 1917, Harvard '40.

David, Jan. 3, 1920, Harvard '42.

John Lloyd, Aug. 30, 1923.

Gay, Mar. 7, 1928.

We report some progress all along the line since 1935.

OFFSPRING: The freshman then is now a graduate of two years standing, employed by IBM—"It's marvellous!" (see Fortune, January, 1940.)

The schoolboy fifth former then is now a senior.

The schoolboy third former then is now a sophomore.

The youngest boy (who evoked the verse beginning "How many men of 1910 . . ." in the last report) is now a schoolboy fifth former and headed for the Class of 1945, indicating that his father's prediction of five years ago—"In '46 we make it, the date of John's degree"—was probably wrong. This will serve to correct the record, pending confirmation in the future (but we must repeat: "Provided father still can take it . . ." etc.). It must not be thought that this mistake was made intentionally for purposes of rhyme and rhythm, because the boy has really skipped a year since 1935.

The daughter,—“the hardest to describe”—is now completing her sixth year in school in New York.

PROFESSIONAL PRACTICE: We report that the practice of civil engineering (specialties: recreation facilities and airports) is still continuing at the old stand—in spite of everything.

OTHER ACTIVITIES: We report a few extra-curricular activities such as service on the boards of governors of hospitals, service as vice-president of the American Institute of Consulting Engineers (1936), etc. We have tried a new adventure, in the realm of education, serving for a brief period as a sort of consultant teacher at the New York University School of Architecture (night school). The activity which has the longest title we can think of is: Committee for Student Guidance of the Metropolitan Section of the American Society of Civil Engineers, in cooperation with Engineers' Council for Professional Development.

HOBBIES: We must to our regret report that we have dabbled no further (since 1935) in the realm of etching but there may be distinct hobby-possibilities—or chore-possibilities—ahead in a recent Christmas gift which bears the title: "Father's Tool-Chest for the Country House." (Thus do our merchants appeal to the baser instincts of their lady-customers!)

RECREATION: We report that practically all the family male sports championships have now passed quietly into the hands of the next generation. Tennis is possibly a technical exception, but only because the old man no longer plays singles. The older generation is still supreme in some of the ladies' events, but only because of the extreme youth of the lady of each generation.

PUBLICATIONS: We can report publication of only occasional articles in technical magazines.

We have in process of preparation a book, which we hope to publish some day, on the design, construction and maintenance of tennis courts.

We once started to write some verses which we thought naively would have the editors of the New Yorker rolling in the aisles. They were to be named: "Life of Father"—with a bow to the memory of Clarence Day—and the first episode, which was completed, bore the title: "Father and the Dog Hospital". However, this episode failed, because of its intimate nature, to pass the family censor, and the resulting discouragement halted the series.

DWIGHT WALTER HADLEY

OCCUPATION: Minister, 3 Glengarry St., Winchester, Mass.

HOME ADDRESS: 3 Glengarry St., Winchester, Mass.

MARRIED: Margaret Louise Blake, Bellows Falls, Vt., Oct. 4, 1916.

CHILD: Martha, Dec. 21, 1922.

I have little of interest to add to my report of 1935. I am still rector of the Church of the Epiphany, Winchester, Massachusetts, having been in this same position since 1931. The work of the ministry is becoming more of a challenge every year and I long to see the day when more young men of character and conviction will find in the ministry a field of service and usefulness.

The last two summers we have spent in Duxbury, Massachusetts. We have become so fond of this particular town that we are now building a house of our own there. We probably shall make Duxbury our permanent home when I retire from the active ministry in 1956.

✠ QUINCY RANDALL HALL

UNMARRIED.

DIED: New York, N. Y., Oct. 24, 1918.

Quincy Randall Hall was born in Milford, New Hampshire, but when he was very young his parents moved to Pittsfield, New Hampshire, where he attended the local schools and after a year at Worcester Academy entered this Class. At the end of his sophomore year he undertook to tutor a boy for college preparation and at the end of the summer he was in such physical shape that he decided that he would forego continuation of his own education and would go west for his health. His first position was in Portland, Oregon, with a lumber firm and later he came east as far as Michigan, still in the lumber business. In 1918, having been away from Pittsfield for more than ten years, he was on his way home to visit his parents when, in New York, he contracted influenza and died there on October 24. At that time his only brother was in service overseas. His parents still live in Pittsfield, New Hampshire.

In his short college career, he was awarded several honors in his studies and his outside interests centered around debating and the work of Phillips Brooks House. During his active business career, he found time for much literary work and wrote many stories and some articles in the field of psychology.

Lawrence, Sept. 21, 1927.

During the past five years of adjustment for nearly all people, I have found the avenue in which I hope, and believe, I can serve usefully and happily.

I am connected with the aims and work of the Citizens Union of the City of New York—a non-partisan organization of disinterested citizens, who for forty-three years have been a force for better city government. Founded by Elihu Root, and one hundred leading citizens, it has been a potent force from the days of Seth Low to that of the Seabury investigation and expose, and the resulting reforms which that upheaval have brought about.

HARVARD CLASS OF 1910

I am also connected with the working out of an original idea of Wilbur C. Phillips (Harvard '04), and his wife Elsie, in the field of human relations. The idea has been put into the hands of every day people, under democratic procedures, in three cities—New York, Milwaukee and Cincinnati. The organization set up is by blocks of approximately 10,000 people, called Social Units. Its workability was proven in many human relationships by and through the people themselves in the health, maternity and child welfare fields. Its pattern is a re-adaptation of our original pattern set up by our forefathers for their simple agricultural economy, to that of the modern age of mass production and consumption—i.e. in the sphere of earning and spending our incomes. A decade of study and research was necessary after the above three experiments, in order to find out how these procedures could be financed by the people themselves. After the collaboration of many people, including Dr. Wesley C. Mitchell, a workable plan has been evolved. It will be given to people desiring to form Social Units, worked out and improved by them, in their everyday living. Dr. Mitchell, (past President of the American Association for The Advancement of Science, and present Director of the National Bureau of Economic Research) says it is the only plan he has seen already worked out in large degree by the people themselves, which offers now a challenge to the definite programs of the menacing march of the “isms”. My humble contribution is primarily in the field of the distribution of products and services.

where his paintings are represented—the Phillips Memorial Gallery, the Cleveland Museum, the Brooklyn Museum, Baltimore Museum, Lewisohn collection, collection of the late Arthur B. Davies, the McBride collection and the collection of Harvard University. I do not know if he was great, but I know our world is poorer because he is dead and that I cannot write without awakening the echoes of thirty-four years.

He came to Harvard with his brother Gerald, also a member of the Class of 1910, in 1906. Howard Pyle whom he had known in Wilmington, Delaware, was his master, and his easy, charming draftsmanship brought him into quick notice. But it was his charm which singled him out. Few if any of the class were more generally popular than he, none perhaps was more deeply loved. And after graduation when he stepped into the New York publishing world a conventional, even a gilded progress along the business route could safely be predicted for him. He confided to some of us that he wanted to paint, but that did not matter; he had to earn a living.

In that apologia pro vita sua which he wrote for the twenty-fifth annual report of the class, he said in the first sentence: "Looking back on these twenty-five years, it seems the best they have contained dates mostly from Harvard."

Alan Seeger was there in New York, and John Reed and Walter Lippmann and other classmates and friends. After a year or two I joined the group of which Bob was one of the least articulate and most assiduous members. Reed joshed him in "The Day in Bohemia, or Life Among the Artists":

"Bob Hallowell,—gloves, hat and all correct," he described him, and went on to tell of one of us, appealed to in our interminable discussions, who

"climbs upon the fence,
And all combine, in scorn, to flog him thence.
Poor Hallowell's dilemma is immense;—
Too bold for that, too cautious to be bold,
He hesitates until the subject's cold."*

Why he turned from an easy business success and took the hard road to Damascus he told in his twenty-fifth anniversary report.

*The Day in Bohemia, or Life Among the Artists, by John Reed, New York, Printed for the Author, 1913, p.44.

He was lunching one day in 1913 at the Harvard Club with John Reed, Walter Lippmann and me. "They were talking about Russia, and I was contributing nothing more than an attentive ear. Jack and Walter, ever gentle toward me and my shortcomings, allowed me to muse in peace. But Edward, with righteous violence, wanted to know what the hell I thought about Russia anyway. I had no thoughts apart from my desk and realized it with disgust. That lunch and Ed Hunt's dart brought about my resignation from the American Magazine, and led to ten strenuous and profitable years on The New Republic." Reed, he wrote, "wanted me to go to France with him and paint. This was still impossible. But it was not impossible to turn my back on commercial publishing, and when the chance came, through Walter Lippmann, to join the original New Republic group, I was ready, thanks to these three classmates, to take it."

At The New Republic he carried an immense load. He was the jack of all trades, making up the paper, designing the format, arranging printing contracts, watching advertising, interviewing prospects, paying the bills, making collections, selling. He was the despised business man among the impresarios, "divergent and very positive personalities," as he called them. His first wife—their marriage ended in divorce—was a member of that original group, but his real bride was the N. R. Those were the days when Colonel House was a familiar spirit, when N. R. editorials this week appeared as parts of the President's message next week, when the editors had the run of the White House, when the Fourteen Points were still in the womb of Time, when the world seemed almost ready to be made safe for democracy.

"Bliss was it in that dawn to be alive,
But to be young was very heaven."

Herbert Croly, '90, the editor-in-chief, had written a brilliant book called "The Promise of American Life." It had helped form the Progressive party program of Theodore Roosevelt in 1912 and influenced in its turn Woodrow Wilson. It was a typically American effort at reconciliation and synthesis. Others had reconciled God and Mammon, science and religion. . . . It was Croly's mission to point out how to solve America's dilemma by using Hamiltonian means to accomplish Jeffersonian ends. There was still Montesquieu's hard saying that the principle of democracy is virtue.

RECORDS OF THE CLASS

But rhetoric could resolve this. America, the traditional "land of promise" was to become the "land of purpose." Walter Lippmann offered us a similar solution in "Drift and Mastery."

Bob had ventured on the road to Damascus when he went to the N. R. in 1914. He was now to go further along that road. He had been painting during his vacations before 1925; he was still to serve the Survey Associates as a consultant after the break with The New Republic and after his one-man shows in Paris and New York. But the inner break was complete when at exactly the half-way mark between his graduation from Harvard and his death, he made up his mind once for all to be an artist. His marriage to Aurelia Caloenesco, a Roumanian painter, marked the beginnings of this new life.

The poverty and discouragement which lay ahead he faced with no false optimism. Once in a black moment when he thought of going back to publishing his wife, he told me, presented an ultimatum: If he gave up art, the thing he loved, she would give him up, take their child, return to Europe, and he would never see either of them again. The sacrifices which John Reed had made when he gave up being the best paid reporter of his time to champion bolshevism, also helped to stiffen Bob's resolution. After Reed's death, Bob had written in the N. R., "He came nearer being honest than any man I have ever known." And later in the same article he wrote, "I take it that whatever a man's conviction, he is not merely either mad or brave when he acts upon it, but fortunate that it leads him to act at all."

Bob ended his tribute to Reed with the quotation from Whitman,
"I do not know what you are for, I do not know what I am for myself, nor what anything is for,
But I will search carefully for it even in being foiled,
In defeat, poverty, misconception and imprisonment—for they too are great . . .
And . . . death and dismay are great."

Another tribute was the posthumous portrait of Reed which he painted and which hangs today in Adams House at Harvard.

Almost in the last year of his life he served as an assistant director of the Federal arts projects, then, as Granville Hicks wrote, "Like William Morris before him, he became convinced that, if the public was not ready or able to patronize the fine arts, perhaps it would patronize the handicrafts. He set himself, therefore, to the task of making quasi-useful articles, such as andirons and door-knockers, that were works of beauty. . . Here, he believed, was a way in which the artist could maintain his integrity within the framework of our system, and he wanted to prove his point to other artists. It was in this struggle that he exhausted himself."

Meantime he had painted many of his classmates or members of their families, and he lists with pride in his last report some of the names of those whose patronage as well as friendship had meant much to him—Richard F. Hoyt, Peabo Gardner, Gil Browne, Frank Page and Harry Shepley. As he painted he talked, or rather he tried to get his sitter to talking. He liked to think of painting as a social, not a solitary art. He liked having people in the room when he worked. But paint, not talk, was his medium.

I am not competent to judge his paintings, but Lee Simonson, '09, has pointed out that it was in New York and on Staten Island where he had his home that he produced some of his most characteristic work, "the half-ruined Colonial mansions in his neighborhood, the dizzying panoramas of skyscrapers near Wall and Broad. New York's skyscrapers have been too often painted from the point of view of the casual passerby and the gaper in the street and become, as a rule, little more than a pattern against the sky. But Hallowell enjoyed living in and among them—his studio for years was a room on the roof of an office building at the corner of Beaver Street—and looking down instead of up at them, gives an exciting sense of their scale and size and height, and expresses the guts of what we call our skyline. . .

"His last period is represented by the still lives of flowers and the self-portrait, paintings on glass—a difficult technical experiment carried through to complete success. These paintings have a sonority of color which he had not achieved before, an opulence of decorative pattern that never goes flat, the richness of enamel that nevertheless keeps the subtleties of sensitive painting in oil. The self-portrait has astounding vitality; it is trenchant and merciless, at once grim and humorous, a perfect self realization, painted with directness and power.* I hope it can be hung next to the portrait of Jack

Reed that Hallowell painted a few years ago, so that both of them can look at posterity together as they lived—friends, artists, and fighters to the last for the causes they believed in.”

✠ GARDNER LUDWIG HARDING

MARRIED: Mabel Davy, London, England, May 6, 1911.

DIED: New York, N. Y., Mar. 20, 1940.

Gardner Ludwig Harding's chief characteristic was earnestness. He had an immense capacity for work and a very straight-thinking brain to direct that energy. He always liked politics and its handmaiden, debating, and was a student of both. He liked individuals and made and kept friends very easily, but he liked to study and to think about groups of people, their relationships to each other and the possibilities for alleviation of friction which modern civilization seems to make usual when large groups continue in daily contact with each other. In these studies he came to believe thoroughly in the purposes and aims of the New Deal. He became a part of it and if he had any qualms about it or any disillusiones, they were only for the weaknesses of those to whom had to be entrusted the details of building the machinery to carry out these aims.

With individuals he was a charming companion and his career world-wide in his time had brought to him a most cosmopolitan list of friends. He was a House of Commons reporter, a war correspondent in China, a reporter in Russia and Japan and for a number of years he managed conventions for the National Foreign Trade Council, a month each year in a different part of the country and, so he wrote in his 25th Report, “And now I am prepared with equanimity, to bear the sight of Harvard men in close proximity.”

He liked to garden and to play tennis and one of his unusual diversions—which became an accomplishment—was the study of Dickens, in which he was one of this country's leaders.

When he did get into close proximity with his particular group of Harvard men, it was to listen easily and talk easily, to enjoy himself and to give much joy.

He died March 20, 1940, in New York, leaving his wife, Mabel Davy, whom he had married in 1911, and his parents.

SIDNEY HERBERT HARE

OCCUPATION: Landscape architect and city planner, 114 West 10th St., Kansas City, Mo.

HOME ADDRESS: 722 Ward Parkway, Kansas City, Mo.

MARRIED: Aurel M. Murtey, Lincoln, Neb., July 11, 1914.

My activities during the last five years have not varied much from those of my previous professional experience. I have carried on consultation work for parks and city planning in Houston, Texas, and have continued my work as consultant to the Park Department at Forth Worth, and this year was retained in a similar capacity at Dallas.

I have written a considerable number of miscellaneous articles on landscape architecture and city planning for magazines, reports, etc.

I was recently elected vice-president of the American Society of Landscape Architects, of which I have been a fellow for some years.

The name of the American City Planning Institute, of which I am a member, has been changed to "The American Institute of Planners."

I still retain my affiliations with the American Institute of Park Executives and National Conference on City Planning, and the American Civic Association, except that the latter two have been changed to the "National Planning Conference" and "American Planning and Civic Association" respectively.

I am now a member of the Mission Hills Country Club, instead of the Indian Hills Country Club. I am still a member of the University Club, Harvard Club and Engineers Club, and other similar organizations.

CHARLES PETER HARRINGTON, JR.

OCCUPATION: Teacher, Kent School, Kent, Conn.

HOME ADDRESS: Kent School, Kent, Conn.

MARRIED: Mary Gertrude Dunphy, Everett, Mass., Jan. 1, 1918.

CHILD: Jane, May 23, 1922, College of New Rochelle '43.

My activities have been about the same as indicated in the last report. I received a recess appointment from former Governor Wilbur W. Cross of Connecticut as county commissioner of Litchfield County in October, 1937. This was terminated in July, 1939. My appointment as a trustee of the Fairfield State Hospital, Newtown, Conn. expired in June, 1939, and I was re-appointed for a six year term by Governor Raymond E. Baldwin. In July, 1939 I was re-elected chairman of the Board. In 1938 and 1939 I served as an examiner in Spanish for the College Entrance Examination Board, being one of the committee of five who prepared the examinations for those years.

I am a member of the Board of Directors of the New England Modern Language Association, and also of the American Association of Teachers of Spanish.

My hobby has shifted from politics to keeping records of the weather for the past five years—both thermometer and barometer readings three times daily. I find the weather quite as fickle as the average politician and a damned site more interesting.

MARRIED: Florence R. Miller, Utica, N. Y., Feb. 28, 1911.

CHILDREN: Florence Seymour, Mar. 15, 1913, married Byron Strongman Miller.

GRANDCHILD: Linda Hart Miller, July 30, 1937.

Richard Seymour, Jr., Apr. 19, 1916.

In 1934, having completed twenty-five years in the life insurance business, and having seen a great change for the worse in the selling side of that article, I decided to follow the example of several of my best life insurance friends and go into the security business. As it turned out I think I jumped from the frying pan into the fire, but, after all they do say that the first hundred years are by far the toughest, so I am still optimistic.

OCCUPATION: Teacher, Charlestown High School, Boston, Mass.

HOME ADDRESS: 24 Westland, Ave., Boston, Mass.

UNMARRIED.

RECORDS OF THE CLASS

I have nothing special to add to my previous record.

I am still on the job at Charlestown High and hope to be able to retire in the near future.

I am interested more and more in the color processes of photography and have had a fair amount of success in working Kodachrome.

I have done but little travelling mostly in Canada and in our own country.

FRANK CRUISE HAYMOND

OCCUPATION: Lawyer, Judge of the Sixteenth Judicial Circuit of West Virginia since May, 1939, Court House, Fairmont, West Va.

HOME ADDRESS: 700 Locust Ave., Fairmont, West Va.

MARRIED: Susan Watson Arnett, Fairmont, W. Va., Jan. 25, 1922.

CHILDREN: William Stanley, 2d, June 13, 1923.

Thomas Arnett, June 14, 1925.

During the last five years I have been active in Bar Association work. In 1935 I was President of the West Virginia Bar Association, and since then I have served on various committees and prepared numerous Association reports. In 1935 I was chairman of the Section on Insurance Law of the American Bar Association. In 1937, 1938 and 1939 I served as state delegate from West Virginia.

From 1935 until my appointment as judge I was lecturer on Insurance Law and Criminal Procedure at the College of Law of the West Virginia University, at Morgantown, West Virginia.

From 1934 until May, 1939 I served as a member of the Judicial Council of West Virginia.

HARVARD CLASS OF 1910

In May, 1936 I was an unsuccessful candidate for judge of the Supreme Court of Appeals of West Virginia.

In May, 1939 I was appointed judge of the Sixteenth Judicial Circuit of West Virginia, which position I now occupy.

WINTHROP PERRIN HAYNES

OCCUPATION: Geologist, 30 Rockefeller Plaza (Room 2150), New York, N. Y.

HOME ADDRESS: "Elmlea" Boxford, Mass.

MARRIED: Anna Hooker Morse, Boxford, Mass., Aug. 10, 1925.

CHILDREN: Lewis Rogerson, May 21, 1926.

Edward Hamilton, July 6, 1928.

I was transferred from London in July, 1936 to the head office of the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey, in New York at 30 Rockefeller Plaza. I am still on the geological staff of foreign production of the company.

Although I often miss the trips I used to make over Europe and to the Near East I am very thankful to be safely settled in the U.S.A. with my family where we only read about bombings and "black outs."

Since my return I have spent all spare time at our country home in Boxford, Mass. We have added some extra woodland to the property and have set out many red pine seedlings. The old white pine woods were hard hit by the hurricane of Sept. 1938 and we had a lot of clearing up to do. I should like to have more time to work in Boxford, but summer vacation and long week-ends from May to October are about all I can manage at present.

My chief hobby is stamp collecting and I have specialized in U. S. stamps and foreign issues previous to 1900.

Since our 25th Reunion there is not much of interest for me to record. The most substantial change in my life occurred when the old stock brokerage firm of Chas. D. Barney & Co., with whom I had been associated for nearly fifteen years, merged with E. B. Smith & Co. on January 1, 1938.

Much curtailment was made in the personnel of both firms and since 1938 I have occupied my time with investment counsel work for estates and individuals.

Fred Martin, Jr., Aug. 9, 1932.

DIED: Fargo, N. D., June 25, 1939.

Fred Martin Hector was born in Fargo, North Dakota, on November 23, 1885. His father, Martin Hector, had settled in Fargo in the late seventies and had been closely identified with the growth of that Western City. Fred grew to manhood with deep concern and high ideals for his native town as well as for the State of North Dakota.

After his preparatory course at Phillips Exeter Academy, his graduation from Harvard in 1910, and from Harvard Law School in 1914, he married Miss Margaret Sewall of Bath, Maine; and established a home in Fargo where they had a family of four daughters and one son. During the twenty-five years residence in Fargo, he was untiring in his devotion to the upbuilding of banking and farming interests, and at the time of his death was President of the Fargo National Bank.

He served for a term of years on the Fargo Public School Board, was a valued member of the Lion's Club of Fargo, and a devoted friend and supporter of the North Dakota Agricultural College.

His personality was an inspiration to all who shared his loyal friendship. His instincts were always for the best good of the state, his city, and his family; and his untimely passing away in June, 1939, closed a life filled with treasured memories.

It hardly seems possible that five years have come and gone since I wrote up my life, but it is so and I am five years older now.

My present activities remain about as before. I am in the same business with the exception that I am now located out in the bushes in Allston. Believe it or not I like it better out here than in town, in the big league.

I have bought a house, where I live now, or I mean the bank has bought it for me for it holds the bag. My daughter, having been graduated from Dean Academy last June, is now a freshman at Simmons College, where she is studying to be a laboratory technician. I thought I remembered some Chemistry from Chem. 1 in college but boy oh boy she has already forgotten more Chemistry than I ever knew. I guess I have slipped quite a bit without realizing it.

Although I never did have any decided hobbies, I do get quite a kick out of doing little jobs around the house. My cellar looks like the hurricane did a first class job on it. My recreation is found in puttering around the flower gardens in the summer. This summer I am going to experiment with this new Vitamin B-1, the pepper-upper for flowers, and if it works as well for them as it is claimed for it I will very probably take a shot of it myself and save myself the expense of the search for the Fountain of Youth.

I have written nothing for publication since my last writing. It is hard enough for me to write this and an occasional letter.

My hair is grayer, if anything, but I still have all of it, and that is more than Stan Moulton can say.

It doesn't seem possible that five years have slipped away and that it can be time for Leon to be calling for more record. My story seems appallingly insignificant in this dizzy world.

My son, Traf, Jr. graduated in June, 1938. My daughter, Edith, was married in Oct., 1938 to Stanley Gibson of Hartford, Conn.

Traf, Jr. was married last June to Frances Cutter of Milton, Mass.

Jessie, my wife, who was not well enough in 1935 to be at our grand reunion, is now much improved. She is able to enjoy life in a quiet way.

We moved in 1936 to smaller quarters in Arlington, Mass.

I am still operating in the life underwriting field and still have a taste for many outdoor activities, but find that while the head is willing the legs aren't what they used to be.

From the year that we met I have loved Ben Hodges; so I write this with a passionate conviction of his importance. Unknown to his classmates, he was brilliant, intense, lucid, extreme. He suffered from painful self-depreciation. These qualities are unimportant when compared to the fact that he had access to the living waters. His purposes were passionate, but hedged about with many difficulties. His spirit, which was indefatigable, finally o'erleaped them all. The pattern of defeat and then of conquest, is the pattern of his life. His final achievement was in my view magnificent: he lifted the tone of the bar and bench of a whole state of the American Union to an appreciably higher and permanent level.

In prep school, he starved himself for food and spent himself in violent exercise, after reading McFaden, and collapsed on 3rd base to spend years in bed with a permanently strained heart. There he started reading Kipling and thence perhaps first formulated his own peculiar mixture of romanticism and cynicism. In college his goal, of all goals for a man with such a heart, was heavy-weight hammer throwing. He built up his skill with technique, collapsed, did it again and again: but he finally won his match. Part New England, part Southern, after law school, he practised first in Boston with me, and then in South Carolina. For South Carolina was in his blood, he was born there, he married there, he really flourished there. After nine years of practice he was appointed as professor of law at the Law School of South Carolina. There he matched the brilliance and the native eloquence of the young southern mind, with the greater brilliance, the distinction, and the discipline of his own mind. The effect of this impact was electric. And he continues to live in the hearts, the minds, and the faculties of many of those pupils whom his spark touched to life. But this was an achievement he carried with bravado past tragic difficulties: first infantile that stripped him of athletic pride so dear to him; then in his last year or two, cancer, changing all taste to a bitterness to him, changing his voice even, while he continued daily to teach, nightly to suffer till almost the day of his death, when the malignancy entered his lungs. Few men have ever been so intensely loved. Few men have been loved by so many, both men and women. So that it was with justification that his widow on the day of his funeral said to his three daughters: "I am so sorry for you. You can never marry so rare a person as I have had." Though it was perhaps with equal justification that I could add: "No, but his daughters' husbands may."

And I, still considering that brilliant creature, may say, as Herrick did, considering Ben Jonson,

"Ah Ben!
Say how or when
Shall we, thy guests,
Meet at those lyric feasts,
Made at the Sun,
The Dog, the Triple Tun,
where we such clusters had,
As made us nobly wild, not mad?
And yet each verse of thine
Out-did the meat, out-did the frolic wine.

HARVARD CLASS OF 1910

My Ben!
Or come again
Or send to us
Thy wit's great over-plus;
But teach us yet
wisely to husband it,
Lest we that talent spend;
And having once brought to an end
That precious stock,—the store of such a wit the world should have no more."

Years ago Ben used to laugh and point out to me an ancient grave stone, at the old church at Stateburg, South Carolina, which, after the name added the words, "a native of Massachusetts but for the past ten years a resident of Sumter county." He said, "if I stick it out long enough perhaps I can be buried at last in the sacred southern soil." He now lies near enough to stretch out his hand and touch this old native of Massachusetts.

HENRY PHIPPS HOFFSTOT

OCCUPATION: Farmer, president of Belcaro Investment Co.

HOME ADDRESS: 5057 Fifth Ave., Pittsburgh, Pa.

MARRIED: Marguerite Martin, New York, N. Y., Jan. 17, 1912.

CHILDREN: Frank Norton, Jan. 2, 1913 (died Jan. 18, 1913).

Henry Phipps, Jr., Nov. 13, 1917, Harvard '39.

Barbara, Aug. 16, 1919.

In November, 1936, control of the Pressed Steel Car Company passed into the hands of competitors and after twenty seven years service with that company, I disposed of my stock and resigned as vice-president. Since then I have devoted my time to my other interests; taking the opportunity of showing my children a little of Europe. After completing three years in Miss Porter's School at Farmington, Conn., my daughter spent the year 1937-38 at Brillantmont, Lausanne, Switzerland. My son Henry, graduated from Harvard in 1939, and is now a member of the first year class in Harvard Law School.

In June, 1938, Mrs. Hoffstot, Henry and I, took a Ford station wagon to Hamburg and after picking up my daughter at Lausanne, we spent ten weeks touring Germany, Italy, Holland and Belgium, with a few days in Paris.

RECORDS OF THE CLASS

The 1938 trip having proved satisfactory, the entire family took a second trip in the same car in 1939, spending eight weeks in England, Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Germany, Hungary—and a few days in Venice. We found ourselves in Munich when the German-Russian Pact was signed. The day before we had experienced difficulty in obtaining gasoline so cut short our visit to Munich and went on to Switzerland. The following Sunday night we arrived in Paris and the next day we were fortunate enough to obtain transportation to New York for my family and station wagon on a special sailing of an East Indian ship, Johan Von Oldenbarnevelt, which was to sail from Amsterdam on August 31st. One trunk which had been forwarded to Bremen was left behind, but by the end of the year it had reached New York via Rotterdam.

Aside from the three weeks winter trip with my family to Florida and Cuba, I have been in Pittsburgh all winter, and expect to spend a considerable part of the coming summer on my "Old Farm" at New Waterford, Ohio.

Since the last report my business affiliations have remained the same, notwithstanding the fact that "banking" has been subject to many changes.

HARVARD CLASS OF 1910

In the winter of 1937, Edith, Betty and I spent several weeks skiing in Sun Valley. Last year, joined by Eleanor, we carried out a long-cherished dream and journeyed to Switzerland. There we enjoyed to the utmost the Alps and all they have to offer in the way of winter sports. From there we travelled down through Italy, and as far south as Taormina, Sicily—a spot never to be forgotten. This trip was crowded with delightful experiences, and easily highlights all that has happened since our “Twenty-fifth.”

To my previously-reported hobbies, I have added a new and interesting one—color photography.

MARRIED: Gertrude Jeanette Wayne, Pittsburgh, Pa., June 12, 1916 (died Sept. 12, 1934).

CHILD: Wayne Louis, Oct. 8, 1920, Bard College, Columbia University.

I am secretary of the Special Pictures Corporation, which, together with the American Committee on Maternal Welfare, produced and distributed the motion picture "The Birth of a Baby." This film was the subject of considerable comment, it may be recalled, when stills from it appeared in Life magazine. Our classmate Burk Symon did some excellent work in connection with its production.

As the designee of the United States Secretary of Labor, I have acted as arbitrator in labor disputes involving the fisheries, maritime, newspaper and many other industries.

JAMES WILLIAM HORWITZ

OCCUPATION: Statistician, 433 East 51st St., New York, N. Y.

HOME ADDRESS: 433 East 51st St., New York, N. Y.

MARRIED: Minna Heilprin, Washington, D. C., Sept. 30, 1911.

CHILD: William Henry, Apr. 8, 1913, Harvard '34, Johns Hopkins '38.

Resigned from Faculty of Harvard University in 1937 with idea of giving all my time to business. I was controller of the Manhattan Shirt Co. for about a year and then resigned. Lately have been doing some research in effectiveness of newspaper advertising for William Filene's Sons Co. in Boston, and seem to have discovered a successful method of appraising effectiveness of advertising, something which so far as I know has never been done before. It concerns itself with a statistical study of certain advertising practices, as shown by the past experience of the company, and helps to determine whether such practices should be continued or altered. It does not, however, attempt to set up a system of prejudging the effectiveness of individual advertisements.

In 1938 the Graduate School of Business Administration of Harvard published a Business Research Study entitled "The Risk of Unemployment and Its Effect on Unemployment Compensation." This was a statistical study of the effect of differences in industries among states on the amount of cyclical, seasonal and technological unemployment to be expected in different states and the consequent varying costs of compensation.

STANLEY RAUSCH HOWARD

OCCUPATION: Manufacturer of machinery, Pneumatic Scale Corporation, Ltd., Norfolk Downs, Mass.

HOME ADDRESS: 24 Andrews Rd., Milton, Mass.

MARRIED: Edna A. Thomas, Wollaston, Mass., Nov. 1, 1920.

CHILDREN: Thomas Parker, Apr. 10, 1926.

Robert Eliot, May 23, 1928.

There has been no great change in my activities during the last five years except the cares and responsibilities of business have increased as has also my enjoyment of life in spite of less leisure time. I have become interested in local Boy Scout work and am trying to teach a Sunday School class. Have spent several weeks travelling for pleasure in Mexico and last year had a small sail boat built which I enjoy racing at Christmas Cove, Maine during the summer.

The only publications I can submit are some rather drab patents covering inventions I have made in connection with the machinery business I am associated with.

Virginia Lloyd, Oct. 17, 1923.

I find from a family diary that four things stand out in our annals since the twenty-fifth anniversary celebration, 1. a summer in Nova Scotia, 2. publication of my novel "Greathouse," 3. Edward, Jr.'s entrance into Harvard, and 4. a three-months' journey which I made to Venezuela in the autumn of 1939.

We were at Baddeck in the summer of 1937, staying in a farmhouse across the bay from Beinn Bhreagh where Dr. Alexander Graham Bell made his home and where our friends the David Fairchilds and Gilbert Grosvenors still live. Dr. Fairchild's biological nucleus was a mile's row across the bay from our landing, and my young son and daughter spent fascinating days there with him and his microscopes and books and cameras.

A novel of mine was about to be published. I spent two years on "Greathouse," (Harcourt, Brace & Co., New York, 1937). It involved a fantastic amount of research, not to speak of the labor of writing. It was planned to appear in two volumes, but with the expert help of Mrs. Harcourt it was pared down to one volume of 423 printed pages. My wife designed the jacket and end papers. The bibliography of book titles reached 1,100 and I used periodicals, newspapers, and manuscript letters and diaries galore. I felt that I was seeing our national history alive, as it really happened, not as Parson Weems or the disciples of the smart-aleck school have deformed it. That summer in Baddeck was filled with anxiety about the book, for the first set of page proofs with my final corrections went astray and the Book of the Month Club rejected it. Still the Harcourts' enthusiasm was there to buoy me up and from Hollywood came a refreshing rain of telegrams showing me that my brother-in-law, Richard Connell, '15, and his wife Louise were ranging from studio to studio telling the movie magnates that the greatest masterpiece since King James wrote the English Bible was now about to appear.

RECORDS OF THE CLASS

When the first reviews came out—by that time we were at the home farm in Ohio—we found that the literati didn't care for it. In fact some of them heartily hated it and the rest praised with faint damns. All the early reviews were hostile, although some of the later ones were complimentary. Apparently the first-flight critics wondered how any author would write such a bad book and how any publisher could publish it. It so stuck in the craw of the first reviewer—he has since been made a professor at Harvard—that almost a year later he used it as an example in a sermon on the evils of novel-writing which he published in the Atlantic Monthly. Alfred Harcourt I learned had “never in his life been so wrong about a book.” Of course Hollywood shut up like a clam, and that was that. As for the hydra-headed public whose neuroses and psychoses “Greathouse” attempted to examine, it was “more than usual ca'm; it did not give a single damn.”

The fate of “Greathouse” convinced me that authoring is a far more risky occupation than betting on the races or feeding quarters into slot machines. But did it cure me? It did not . . .

In the autumn of 1939 I was asked by the Standard Oil to go to Venezuela and look at social agencies. It was exactly twenty-five years since I had been in Belgium for Hoover's Relief Commission. I traveled the country from end to end, on foot, on mule-back and horse-back, in passenger automobiles and tool-pushers and four-ton trucks, in Pan American and Company planes, in cayucos and piraguas and speed-boats and tankers, visiting schools, hospitals, churches, athletic fields, cock pits, bull rings, agricultural colonies and experiment stations and oil camps,—just looking and listening. Since coming home, George Warren '10 and I have had several conferences on refugee resettlement in South America.

As I write, the Standard Oil has asked me to go back to Venezuela for a few months, so I must miss the reunion in June.

HOME ADDRESS: 14 Barasford Ave., Lowell, Mass.

MARRIED: Etta May Wilkins, Swampscott, Mass., Aug. 3, 1923.

During the last five years my activities have remained about the same. Present "prosperity" has been trying. I have never had to work so hard as under these business conditions. Working harder now than thirty years ago—is not regimentation wonderful!

I do find it necessary, and advisable, every other year to take four to six weeks off in order to get a vacation by combining business and pleasure and calling on certain Southern trade.

I have just finished a 7500 mile trip by automobile with the wife, including Knoxville, Tenn. (visiting University of Tenn), Memphis, Little Rock, Arkansas, Dallas, Texas (Southern Methodist and the Cotton Bowl), Waco (Baylor University), Austin (University of Texas), Houston (Rice Institute), San Antonio, Texas; Baton Rouge, La., (Louisiana State University), New Orleans (Tulane), over Florida, and the Atlantic Coastline home.

This trip and others have given me now an opportunity to see practically every institution south of the Mason-Dixon. Of particular interest are our sisters of the South—William & Mary, and University of Virginia.

To travel thus is one of my hobbies. May business, Government, and these other elements apparently ganging up on us give me further opportunities to indulge.

Francis Van Praag, Mar. 13, 1920.

I retired from practise two years ago. During the last twenty years I have from time to time worked on my hobby, the genealogy of Americans of Jewish ancestry and during the last five years I have done a great deal of work on the subject. I have written the family histories of those Jews who were in this country during the 17th and 18th Centuries, the earliest family having present-day descendants having its beginning in 1682. I have brought most of these lines of descent up to the present time. In addition, I have written the family histories of a good many families with immigrant ancestors in the 19th Century. The collection has grown during the years and is now very large. I am the only person in this country, as far as I know, who has tackled this job systematically. In 1935 I published one number of a magazine devoted to the subject and called The Saint Charles after the boat which brought the first Jews to this country in 1654. The enterprise failed, however. It looks as if I had become the authority on this large slice of American history in this country, at least so I am told. Having a hobby like this is not always what it's cracked up to be. It has a tendency to crowd me out of my home. It became a source of considerable expense at times and had to be curtailed. Now I am trying to get a society together to take over the job, which has ramified far beyond my ability to take care of it. I believe that it is now important to have all this material publicly available, for it shows that the Jews in this country have intermarried with those of other faiths to a very great extent, a fact now generally unknown, due to the neglect by the Jews of their family histories, a neglect which is almost complete. Its purely historical value is self-evident.

Edith Morris, June 30, 1930.

After five years I am confronted with another accounting marked "Important" and bringing the realization of many things left undone and to the best of my recollection most of my good resolutions to be reported as accomplished in the future, if ever.

I have been occupied professionally and unprofessionally with varied work and interesting problems carried on under the added excitement resulting from applied regulation. I have yet to catch up with the changing political, social, and economic conditions, with particular stress on the latter.

The apparently limitless energy of my wife and the number and age of my children give me the advantage of continuing to enjoy and appreciate all that is a part of youth. Furthermore, the more I see of my children the better I understand myself, often very helpful.

We have taken few long holidays, being content to slip off "en famille" for short fishing and hunting trips in the woods or cruising on a small schooner. As a family we have always been fond of outdoor life and sports and I continue to enjoy most of them, even CHILDREN: Mary Fletcher, July 10, 1922.

William Philip, Feb. 28, 1926.

John Fletcher, July 14, 1931.

DIED: Apr. 30, 1938.

Maurice John Leonard came to Harvard in September, 1906, endowed with a strong body, an active mind, a charming personality and a firm ambition to succeed. His pleasing smile, frank manner, keen wit, and interesting conversation made lasting friendships with all those with whom he came in contact. Even at this early age he had the ability to make quick decisions and to act upon them. He was fond of sports: baseball, football, boxing, and later in life tennis, horseback riding and golf. He was a rugged competitor, tried his best to win fairly, and if victorious was not conceited; he never "rubbed it in." If a loser, he accepted his defeat with good humor, a hearty laugh, and friendly words of congratulation. He was a conscientious student, worked hard in all of his courses, and was most interested in economics, government and literature.

After receiving his degree, Maurice went to Cuba and engaged in the sugar business until he resigned his position and returned to the United States to enlist as a soldier in the World War. After the war he spent some considerable time in Europe disposing of surplus war material for the United States Government as his business ability and knowledge of the Spanish language made him peculiarly fitted for this work.

Upon his honorable discharge from the army he resumed his work in the growing and refining of sugar. His ceaseless energy, driving force, hard work, knowledge of all departments of the business, and confidence in his own judgment and ability made him an outstanding executive in his chosen field.

After the war he was married. His family life with his wife and three children was extremely happy. He devoted all of the strength and enthusiasm of his mind and body to their well being.

RECORDS OF THE CLASS

In his busy life he always found time to keep in touch with his friends—both old and new. Wherever he might happen to be, he wrote to them and was interested in them. They were in all walks of life from the humblest of occupations to the highest. A faithful friend, a dutiful son, an affectionate brother, and a loving and devoted husband and father, his passing away is mourned by all.

Since 1935 there has been very little of interest to report. With the present administration in power and the S. E. C., Wall St. has had a decidedly hard time of it.

A great many of one's activities, hobbies and recreations have been curtailed due to the very great restrictions we "Wall Streeters" have been put under. Its a case of the "spirit being willing, but the 'cash' is weak."

Seeing my classmates from time to time is one of the pleasantest pastimes as we reminisce and think of the many glorious days we have had in the past and hope for in the future.

Leon's injunction—I might even say because of the italics, his order—to write briefly gives me a feeling of regret. This feeling is not because of the limitations set on my own writing because I have never had much to offer and have submitted even that little with the feeling that what is interesting to the writer may prove boring to the reader. The regret is, rather, that I shall never again enjoy the pleasure of devouring from cover to cover a volume of the encyclopaedic proportions of our Twenty-fifth Report. From now on, I must rely mainly on statistics, be they vital or anaemic.

Briefly, then, I have continued to assist, where called upon, in the planning and execution of the engineering projects which have been handled by Jackson and Moreland during the last five years. These have varied all the way from steam-electric generating plants for industrial concerns and public utilities to a two-way radio system for a municipal police department.

For recreation, a July holiday with the family on the shores of Lake Champlain.

No hobbies, no publications except contracts and specifications.

umes, Houghton Mifflin Company. The latter was chosen by the American Institute of Graphic Arts as one of the fifty best of the year—for looks. More interesting is the publishers' recent report that it is the best-seller in its field. It is used throughout the country in colleges like Harvard, Yale, Columbia, and Bob Jones College, Tenn. Part of the summer after the books were completed I spent in Scotland and England, vacationing and unearthing some facts about a remarkable but little-known American of the last century, Josiah Warren, about whom some time I hope to write.

At present I am at work on a college text-book to be called "English Prose Writers of the Eighteenth Century," Macmillan; and with Robert Withington '06, a case-book on literary criticism from Plato to the present, Appleton-Century.

Outlook? I still believe in forms and processes that are necessarily slow, and depend most upon the individual: education, democracy, the Sermon on the Mount. Or, as Harvard men might say noblesse oblige: from each according to his ability, to each according to his need.

Gregory, May 5, 1922.
David, June 17, 1925.

There is little to add to the last report. I still enjoy teaching. During my sabbatical year of 1936-37 I studied in Europe, doing research work in the field of Celtic manuscripts in England and Ireland, and collecting much material in Germany for a projected critical biography of Sigfrid Karg-Elert (d.1932), an Aryan German musician of importance who has been forgotten in the political shuffle. It is still in manuscript. During that year I did a "Ben Hur" of the cathedral city organs in the important European countries, playing over fifty instruments in varied states of disrepair. It was great fun.

My hobbies remain constant; in fact, they are my recreations. During the last year the plight of the German and Austrian refugees who have settled near Boston seems to engage some of my time. One does what one can do.

I still dislike bridge.

Gene, Jan. 28, 1918, Wellesley '40.

Jane, June 21, 1920 (died Nov. 29, 1920).

As I review my situation at the end of the five year period between the 25th and the 30th what do I find?

Business the same,—name of the business the same,—business address the same,—residence the same,—clubs the same,—family the same. Only difference—Sterling, then a junior in college is now finishing his third year in Cornell Medical. (He grows daily more enthusiastic over his work.) Gene, then at Brimmer, is now a senior at Wellesley—scheduled to graduate at the time we start our 30th reunion.

In the meantime I guess I have been working the children's way through college.

I am a little fatter, I know. I am a little balder, I fear. I play golf a little more often, but my game shows little improvement. I always did drink a little, but now I do a little more.

I am looking forward to our 30th Reunion with not a little, but a lot of pleasant anticipation.

Joseph Dolby, Sept. 18, 1928.

In the last five years I have continued working at the profession which I took up a few years after breaking up camp with my classmates in Cambridge back in 1910. As the years pile up my enjoyment of this profession increases; this is perhaps due to the fact that in the course of the day, on all sides, I find myself surrounded by young life.

My hobbies are music and handicraft. Besides finding recreation in these I find still more in the companionship of my family, particularly in the summer time which we spend in New Hampshire where we try to convert a group of old farm buildings to an all year home to which I have dreams and hopes of retiring some day.

Joffrion, June 18, 1923, University of Pennsylvania '44.

In 1939 I built a house which I designed myself. I enjoyed both the designing and building and am pleasantly surprised at the results.

In 1939 I was married. That has also turned out most successfully.

This year an airplane wing on which I have been working for a long time is to be installed on a service type airplane for the United States Navy. The flight tests which I hope will take place next summer will be a great event for me.

Another important occurrence which has just taken place is the decision of the Sun Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Co. to put into production a Diesel engine which I have developed in collaboration with an associate in this company.

My hobby is designing, my recreations are sailing, swimming, tennis and squash.

Continued Harvard associations include first vice-president, Harvard Club of San Francisco (1935) and president (1936) when I was privileged to attend the great Tercentenary Celebration; listening in 1937 to the Harvard-Yale football broadcast at the B.B.C. studio, London (perhaps you heard our cheer direct to the Stadium); meeting Harvard men in different parts of the world; and flying last week with Dave Webster who lives across the street, has his own plane and is in charge of the Civic Aeronautics instruction at Stanford.

Academic duties are primarily those of director of the Summer Quarter, professor of Geography and International Trade in the Graduate School of Business, a directorship in Hoover Library of War, Revolution and Peace, and papers before professional societies. Allied activities are Committee on International Relations of American Association of University Professors, Social Science Research Conference of the Pacific Coast, and director every third year of the Institute of World Affairs which meets annually at Riverside, California. Delivered series of five lectures on "Changing Problems of Political Geography" at Postgraduate Institute of International Studies, Geneva (1938); week-end lecturer, University of the South West, Exeter (1937); lectured at College of Chinese Studies, Peking (1939).

Hobbies and recreation are related largely to family life (which cannot be properly or adequately expressed in this Report), community affairs, sport, and travel. San Francisco is the scene of many special interests including the Institute of Pacific Relations, Pacific Area Committee of the Golden Gate International Exposition,

HARVARD CLASS OF 1910

Pacific Ocean Commerce Section (chairman) of the Commonwealth Club of California, and Bohemian Club. For no apparent reason, my golf has been progressively poor—a sad thought for a Royal and Ancient Club member. During each of the past five years I have utilized my spring vacation and sabbatical year (1937–38) to indulge in foreign travel,—in 1936, to Northern Europe including the United Kingdom and Scandinavia; in 1937–38, to Europe and the Mediterranean after encircling most of South America, and sailing from Rio de Janeiro via Lisbon; and in 1939, to Japan, Korea, Manchuria, and North China. Highlights of foreign travel have included Easter on the Riviera with the entire family, a trip to Vienna, Budapest and Prague immediately after the Anschluss, in Dublin when Corrigan dropped from the skies, attendance at the Derby, seeing for the first time such historic spots as Carthage, Karnak and Malta and renewing friendships in the Near East, noting striking contrasts in South America, visiting the Moslem University at Cairo and universities of Europe and Latin America, Stanford dinner at Tokyo, American Club luncheons at Tokyo, Tientsin and Peking, and official visits to the Forbidden City and to the Great Wall of China.

Recent articles have been published in the Harvard Business Review, Geographical Review, Stanford Illustrated Magazine, the Proceedings of Pacific Economic Association, Association of Pacific Coast Geographers, and Institute of World Affairs; book reviews have appeared in Survey Graphic and American Economic Review.

CHILD: William Stix, Jr., Oct. 30, 1939.

In 1937 my many years of bachelorhood ended, with my marriage to lovely Elizabeth Roe. Many friends aware of the happiness we have found together, have felt free to comment upon my not marrying earlier as a mistake, however I have replied repeatedly, that as I did not know Elizabeth until a very short time before we married, my only regret is that fate or circumstance did not bring us together before. The arrival of Billy Jr. last October, has brought further happiness to us.

The Milius Shoe Company has grown substantially during the past five years. Although manufacturing style shoes is a trying occupation, fortunately the organization has grown stronger year by year, and I have found more time for outside activities—serving as president of the St. Louis Shoe Mfgs. Association, and as director of the Associated Industries of Missouri, the St. Louis Symphony Society, The Jewish Hospital of St. Louis, and The Saint Louis Jewish Federation. Travels have included trips to France, to Italy, and to Bermuda. Music and outdoor sports have continued as hobbies—along with gardening.

John Bradford, Aug. 8, 1916, Harvard '38, Harvard Medical School '42, married Elizabeth Watson.

Elizabeth Anne, Oct. 30, 1921.

During the last five years I have been engaged actively in the private practice of medicine, with particular reference to its psychological aspects and to psychotherapeutic work. I have also become a qualified psychoanalyst and have been using this method of treatment with selected patients. Last year (1939) I was elected vice-president of the New York Psychoanalytic Society. In November 1938 I severed my connection with Silver Hill, New Canaan, Conn., where I had established a psychotherapeutic unit.

Thinking thereafter to become a hardboiled Metropolitan, I was disturbed to find that the call of the wild still persisted, and yielded once more to the siren and established in connection with my associate, Dr. Daniel Blain, a new center for the treatment of psychosomatic disorders at "Tratelja," Diamond Point on Lake George, New York. The ideal motivating this new center is to provide a place where maladjustments, functional nervous disorders and convalescent organic cases can be given the benefit of modern medical and psychiatric care at a moderate cost. In January, 1940, we were granted a charter by the New York State Board of Social Welfare for the establishment of a philanthropic corporation to be known as The Lake George Foundation, donations to which will be used to defray expenses of the patients who are unable to pay for their costs of keep and care.

Aside from these work activities I do a bit of fishing, a bit of golf, a bit of hill climbing, a bit of tennis, a bit of bridge, and shoot an annual crap game. My more cultural pursuits include attending concerts, theaters and art exhibitions, whenever I get a chance, and participating in a dub drawing class in the studio of Mr. Augustus Vincent Tack.

DIED: Dedham, Mass., Aug. 13, 1937.

Laurence Willcomb Morgan died after a long illness, at his home in Dedham, August 13, 1937. Although he was only in college for two years, he retained throughout his life many of the friendships he had made during those years. For a while after leaving college he was in active business, but for a long time had been retired, with the management of some estates as his only business occupation. He was always occupied, however, in matters which had to do with sport and was never without occupation, and never without companionship in those occupations. A friendly person, his retired life did not tend to enlarge greatly the circle of his acquaintanceship, but it did bring closer to him those earlier friendships which he made so easily and which remained so strong.

He is survived by his wife and three children, one of whom, Laurence Jr., is with the American Ambulance in France.

There is nothing new in my life except a series of hospital visits—four trips since December, 1936. I guess it must have been a reaction from the 25th to make up or offset the good time I had during those four days. I have the possibility of another session next month, but hope my present treatment may render it unnecessary. At any rate I am feeling much better than I have for the past two or three years—maybe in preparation for the 30th reunion. Hope to be there anyway—maybe not able to get around in any procession, but can sit up to a table.

I expressed the hope in our twenty-fifth class report that I would still be here on our fiftieth anniversary right on the job, still keeping pace with improvements of time and with all my associates. Well, I'm here, looking forward to our thirtieth and express the same hope again for our fiftieth.

My life during the past five years has been spent in the same business of construction, and I have much to be grateful for. My oldest son is now at Harvard, and my daughter a junior in Manhattanville College of the Sacred Heart in New York. My youngest son is still in preparatory school and looking forward to entering Harvard.

Since the Harvard Tercentenary, I have become more and more interested in Harvard affairs and have been elected a governor of DIED: Montclair, N. J., Nov. 4, 1938.

Neves served in Medical Corps, U. S. Navy, 1916–1919, and thereafter practiced medicine in Montclair, N. J.

His many friends knew him as quiet, unassuming, sympathetic and intellectually keen. With all the demands of the exacting practice of medicine his varied interests were maintained. He was a pleasing conversationalist and liked nothing better than to debate a point.

It was tragic that he, a heart specialist, was doomed to observe and sense all the stages of progress in his own illness. A coronary heart attack had told him its story and led him with great fortitude to plan for the future of his family.

His last happy outing was spent at his beloved Harvard. After the week-end of October 29, 1939, seeing old friends—recalling old scenes and enjoying the Harvard football victory over Princeton—he arrived home feeling better and in high spirits.

The following week, November 4th, 1939, the call came.

✠ THOMAS JEFFERSON NEWBOLD

MARRIED: Katherine Hubbard, Boston, Mass., Jan. 21, 1914.

CHILDREN: Thomas Jefferson, Jr., Nov. 2, 1914, Harvard '37, Harvard Business School '39.

Thomas, Jan. 4, 1916, Harvard '38, Harvard Business School '40.

Katherine, Mar. 6, 1918.

Sarah Hubbard, Mar. 23, 1922.

Herman LeRoy, July 8, 1924.

DIED: Upper Saranac Lake, N. Y., July 5, 1939.

Thomas Jefferson Newbold was the only son of Thomas Newbold and Sarah Lawrence Coolidge. On both the paternal and maternal sides of the family he was descended from old and distinguished American families, including the Rhinelanders of New York and the Newbolds of Philadelphia. He was the direct descendant of Thomas Jefferson, the third president of the United States, and a grandson of Thomas Jefferson Coolidge, of Boston, once minister to France, and one of the outstanding New England financial and railroad men.

His early childhood was spent in Hyde Park and New York City, and through the years 1900–1905 he went to Groton School, where he prepared for Harvard. During the years 1906–1910 he attended the College.

On leaving Harvard he served in various capacities, first with the New York Trust Company during the years 1911–12, and afterwards in the employ of the International Cotton Mills of Boston in 1913–15, part of which time he spent in England. Shortly after the outbreak of the World War Newbold came home from England and worked in the Old Colony Trust Company and then afterwards with the National City Co. of New York in their Boston office.

His health was never robust and on account of this he was advised to lighten his work and thereafter interested himself in various manufacturing projects, and at the time of his death was president of G & N Engineering Co., manufacturers of high-grade switchboards, in which company he owned the controlling interest.

Although not a club man, he did belong to the Knickerbocker Club of New York, the Somerset Club of Boston, the Club of Odd Volumes, of which he was a most devoted member and served on the Executive Committee and of The Country Club, Brookline. He was an ardent collector of Dickens, besides having many other fine and rare books.

He was always deeply interested in everything that pertained to the College, and his Class, and although perhaps his activities were limited, this was due to his delicate health rather than to a lack of interest or desire. He was appointed and served on the Visiting Committee to the Arnold Arboretum. Two of his boys attended Harvard, one of them now being in the Business School, and the youngest boy, now in Brooks School, is also headed for Harvard.

During college he had a small circle of devoted friends, which continued up to the time of his death, and their affection for him was lasting. Many of us remember with pleasure a rather unusual but delightful habit he had of always having tea in his rooms each afternoon, and we used to drop in for a delightful cup and a pleasant chat with him.

The outstanding characteristic of Newbold's short but useful life was his devotion to his family and his small, but immediate, circle of friends, but above all his family came first and their welfare and happiness came before his own pleasure, except that one could not say that this was not his greatest pleasure, to be with them and to do for them to the very end.

His family, his friends and even his doctors did not realize that he was suffering from a bad heart, and this accounted no doubt for his sometimes apparent reluctance to participate in affairs outside of his family, except those in which they were interested. On July 5, 1939, having celebrated the fourth of July at Saranac Lake, where the family were all together, he died suddenly of a heart attack.

To all of us who knew Thomas Jefferson Newbold he will always be an inspiration of what a perfect husband, father and friend should be.

There is not much to report for the last five years that does not apply to most of us. The investment business has probably suffered as much as any line of endeavor from the growth of bureaucracy and the centralization of power in the hands of commissions in Washington. Uncertainty as to the rules of any game make it hard to play, and uncertainty has been the key-note of the investment business for the last five years.

As for myself, in the summer of 1937 I had a very serious case of general peritonitis nearly resulting in my joining the ranks of those who have gone before, but at the moment of reporting I seem to be enjoying as good health and spirits as ever before. My chief diversions continue to be golf and bird shooting.

John Henry, July 11, 1923.

David, Oct. 1, 1926.

Have just finished reading what I had to say for the Twenty-fifth Reunion report. There is very little to add, and as a matter of fact, I would not want to change any of the comments which I made at that time.

My medical life and practice is about the same with the exception that I am now chief of the Second Medical Service (Harvard teaching unit) at the Boston City Hospital. There have been no new medical publications of any note.

RECORDS OF THE CLASS

I am slowly getting over the shock of having a son at Yale. Entertaining a group of Yale sophomores following a Yale football victory over Harvard, is an experience that probably few Harvard men have been forced to enjoy.

As far as I can make out (and this despite normal increase in business) it becomes increasingly difficult to make both ends meet as the years progress. Presumably it will always be so. However, the game is worth the candle. Life is pretty good fun after all, and I cannot say that I have any serious complaints.

SIGOURNEY BUTLER OLNEY

OCCUPATION: Lawyer, 177 Montague St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

HOME ADDRESS: Hewlett, L. I., N. Y.

MARRIED: Elisabeth Hare Powel, New York, N. Y., Apr. 18, 1922.

CHILDREN: Sigourney Butler, Jr., Apr. 6, 1924.

ANDREW JOSEPH ONDERDONK

OCCUPATION: American lawyer, Rue Georges Clémenceau, Cannes A.M., France.

HOME ADDRESS: Villa Rocamare, Cannes, France.

MARRIED: Margarete Born, Cannes, France, Jan. 8, 1940.

It would be difficult to sum up my activities briefly and I doubt that they would interest my classmates particularly.

Will always be glad to write to any classmates who have any special inquiries in mind, or to have any classmates visiting this part of Southern France, come to see me.

Since the above was written, Onderdonk has returned to this country. His present address is 992 Memorial Drive, Cambridge, Mass.

WARREN ORDWAY

OCCUPATION: Advertising, 530 Atlantic Ave., Boston, Mass.

HOME ADDRESS: 90 Warren St., Newton Centre, Mass.

MARRIED: Elizabeth Rich Chester, Newton Centre, Mass., Oct. 4, 1925 (died Nov. 13, 1927); Gertrude Gould Ross, Newton Centre, Mass., Oct. 28, 1933.

CHILD: Elizabeth Chester (Polly), Oct. 18, 1927.

HARVARD CLASS OF 1910

Life has glided smoothly for the last five years, with interest persisting in our garden, antiques, music, and kindred hobbies. I have published no books, but expect Parker Brothers to publish soon my game, "Sky Riders," an interplanetary travel board game inspired by a recent dip into astronomy.

CHARLES DEVENS OSBORNE

OCCUPATION: Newspaper publisher, Auburn Publishing Co., Auburn, N. Y.

HOME ADDRESS: 34 Dill St., Auburn, N. Y.

MARRIED: Edith Wendell, Boston, Mass., Jan. 18, 1913.

CHILDREN: Devens, Nov. 18, 1914 (died Nov. 18, 1914).

Agnes Devens, Nov. 6, 1915, married John Augustus Griswold, Jr.

When the last report was published I was a member of the New York State Relief Administration. I resigned in August, 1935, to become a candidate for mayor of Auburn. In November of that year I was again elected to this office and served until January 1, 1940, making a total of eight years as mayor. During this time I had the honor of twice being elected as president of the New York State Mayors' Conference. Two years ago I was chosen (and still am) a member of the New York State Public Service Training Council, an advisory body within the State Department of Education on matters pertaining to in-service training of public servants.

I have continued to serve as a member of the Democratic State Committee, and am about to stand again for election to this body. Twice I have been a delegate to Democratic State Conventions, at both of which Governor Herbert H. Lehman was nominated.

On the 20th of January, this year, my daughter, Agnes Devens, was married to John Augustus Griswold, Jr., a research assistant in the Museum of Comparative Zoölogy at Harvard.

In January of last year I fell and broke my hip. This accident has laid me up pretty completely as far as sports are concerned, and it is problematical if I shall ever again play my favorite game of golf or sail a race in my 19 footer. However, paraphrasing Captain Morris,

"But Bridge awhile holds off despair,
Nay, bids a hope remain;
And that I think's a reason fair
To fill my glass again."

RICHARD MARSHALL PAGE

OCCUPATION: Lawyer, 90 Broad St., New York, N. Y.

HOME ADDRESS: 350 Weaver St., Larchmont, N. Y.

MARRIED: Mary Alice Sebolt, Portsmouth, N. H., Jan. 14, 1910.

CHILDREN: Richard M., Jr., Aug. 31, 1910, Harvard '32, University of Virginia '32.

Gerald Schuyler, Nov. 13, 1919, Cornell '41.

During the past five years I have continued to practice law in New York City, but had the misfortune to lose my father and partner, William H. Page '83 on October 2, 1935.

My hobbies are contract bridge and mah jong and my athletic activities are still swimming, tennis and golf.

WILLIAM KINGMAN PAGE

OCCUPATION: Metallurgical engineer—consulting, 55 Liberty St., New York, N. Y.

HOME ADDRESS: Bernardsville, N. J.

MARRIED: Olive Carpenter Stebbins, Avalon, Cal., Feb. 8, 1912 (died Feb. 15, 1917); Madeline LaBaugh, Forest Hills, N. J., June 1, 1925.

CHILD: William Kingman, Jr., Nov. 18, 1913, married Alice Malmgren.

Very little to report since the 25th. Having suffered the loss of both parents and a younger brother in the intervening period, have led a somewhat retired life.

My present hobbies are hunting and the development of small arms and ordnance with a speculative eye on the immediate and foreboding future of this country.

Retired, retreated, resigned (or what have you) from the automobile business in 1935. Spent a year selling life insurance for the Equitable. In 1936 came actively into Parker Brothers, Inc. Have been secretary and director of the corporation for some years and was made treasurer in 1939.

GEORGE ALANSON PARKER

OCCUPATION: Lawyer and trustee, Barrister's Hall, Boston, Mass.

HOME ADDRESS: 71 Mt. Vernon St., Boston, Mass.

MARRIED: Anne Bradford Holden, New Bedford, Mass., Sept. 1, 1927.

RECORDS OF THE CLASS

Since the last report I resigned from the State Emergency Public Works Commission because of my election to the Massachusetts House of Representatives from Ward 5, Boston, in 1936. During that session of the legislature I served as clerk of the Committee on Legal Affairs and was a member of the Committee on Military Affairs. I was re-elected to the House in 1938 and served as clerk of the Committee on the Judiciary and as a member of the Committee on Contested Elections. During my first term in the House I was vice-chairman of a recess committee to study the Port of Boston and vice-chairman of a recess committee on the Problems of Unemployed Youth. During my second term I have been vice-chairman of a committee studying conditions in connection with the granting of pardons and paroles since the term of ex-Governor Fuller.

In 1938 I was appointed a trustee of Bradford Junior College and have been chairman of its Building Committee responsible for the construction of two new buildings.

In 1939 I was re-appointed to the Board of Trustees of the Boston City Hospital by Mayor Tobin.

I have continued in my law practice and as a trustee of the estate of Lotta M. Crabtree.

CHILDREN: Eric Christopher John, Oct. 31, 1932.

Dorothy Mary, Feb. 28, 1934.

During the past five years I have thanked God for an absorbing job, excellent health, and a happy family. No cataclysmic events have overtaken me personally. I believe more firmly in the form of government under which we live, but not in its administration at present; and in education that aims at liber homo, old style. I cross the continent twice a year to sail a boat for two months in Maine and New Brunswick, where I am inclined to fiddle while Rome is burning; make and rig a fair ship model during odd moments in the winter; read too much about semantics and too many newspapers; never turn on the radio unless I know what's at the other end. No publications.

LEAVITT COOLEY PARSONS

OCCUPATION: Publisher, advertising, sales counsel, 4 Park St., Boston, Mass.

HOME ADDRESS: North St., Medfield, Mass. (summer, Manchester, Mass.).

MARRIED: Margaret Stevens, Boston, Mass., Sept. 21, 1918 (died Oct. 22, 1938).

CHILD: Margaret, Jan. 30, 1936.

Although the last five years have been to some extent "years of depression", spiritually as well as financially, I feel I have nevertheless done more. I have worked harder—with no vacation since my last report—but seem to have accomplished a greater number of things and to have received enough unexpected recognition to make the world appear not entirely cruel. I write more and sell more. I speak at more meetings and sit in on more committee sessions. Most of these have to do with community projects or sales promotion plans. Am a member of New England Council Marketing Committee, was chairman of their New Eng. Days Publicity Committee, am Marketing Counsel of New Eng. Fresh Egg Institute and member of Advisory Committee "American Fair Trade Council", New York.

A tragic illness changed my homelife, but I have a four-year-old daughter as a worthwhile responsibility. That means I'm her "hobby".

Jane Cortelyou, Jan. 6, 1931 (died Mar. 4, 1931).

Each request for a class report seems to signalize the necessity for a trip to Europe. 1940 is no exception for I am just about to leave in spite of the war II. As a result I may not be able to get back to Cambridge for our 30th, but I'm going to try.

In 1936 I was made vice-president and treasurer of E. F. Houghton & Co. which position I occupy at present. Immediately after Roosevelt was re-elected in 1936 I was in Europe for some time in connection with the various foreign activities of the company with which I am associated. Since my return, nothing extraordinary has occurred. Continue to play golf in the summer and badminton in the winter whenever I can. My only new hobby has been an awakened interest in the raising of "boxer" pups.

The interesting activities of 5 years can certainly be compressed into a few lines.

RECORDS OF THE CLASS

Katherine Elizabeth, Aug. 21, 1916, married Harold Edward Elsberry, Tennessee '37.

GRANDCHILD: Harold Edward Elsberry, Jr., Aug. 8, 1938.

DIED: Memphis, Tenn., Oct. 14, 1938.

When we were graduating from college, Aylma Young Pearson was finishing a year in the Law School of the University of Mississippi, and immediately thereafter entered the practice of law in Memphis, Tennessee. He remained a resident of Memphis until his death on October 14, 1938.

Until 1922, he practiced law; but then turned to real estate and real estate development and continued in this occupation, at some times more actively than others.

Living as he did at such a distance from Cambridge and in a section where there are comparatively few Harvard men, he remained always loyal, thoughtful of his responsibilities to the Class and to the College.

He is survived by his wife and two daughters, Aylmarie and Katherine.

During the past five years, my activities have been quite like the preceding five years. My vocation, as one of the attorneys for the New Haven Railroad, at Boston, has remained unchanged; and my vacations, largely spent at Sakonnet, Little Compton, Rhode Island, have been quite the same; but, in looking back over the five year period just elapsed, in respect to the New Haven Railroad's affairs, I find it difficult to realize the fact that the New Haven entrained upon its reorganization shortly after our last reunion; i. e. in the fall of 1935, and has been in the throes of it ever since. The end of the journey is not yet in sight. Congratulations to my classmates, both Bob Henderson and Dick Hall, that their respective "B&M" and "B&A" have both staved off reorganization, so far.

To pass from such a burdensome subject to lighter things,—my vacations in the past five summers have been spent, more and more, in sailing at Sakonnet, particularly during last summer, and participating in the activities of the Race Committee of the newly-embarked Sakonnet Yacht Club, of which my modest classmate, Tebby Brayton, is the backbone and able commodore.

Gertrude Knowlton, Feb. 13, 1920, Vassar '42.

Florence Anne, Apr. 2, 1922.

My activities during the past five years include: chairman, Scarsdale Board of Appeals for Zoning; member Executive Committee Board of Governors White Plains Hospital; member Engineering Advisory Committees Princeton and New York Universities; trustee Vassar College; examiner for Sanitary Engineering Positions, N. Y. Civil Service; vice-president American Society of Civil Engineers, chairman Committee on Securities and of Committee on Arrangements for British-American Engineering Congress, a casualty of the present war; chairman of Water Works Practice Committee of the American Water Works Association; member of Council of American Institute of Consulting Engineers.

Included in my engineering organization are the following Harvard trained engineers; Robert W. Sawyer, 3rd, M.S. 1930; Alfred W. Sawyer, M.S. 1934; Richard Hazen, M.S. 1937; Robert D. Mitchell, M.S. 1939; Carl A. Arenander, M.S. 1929; Albert H. Stevenson, M.S. 1937 and Malcolm Pirnie, Jr., A.B., 1939. With the aid of engineering graduates of Rensselaer, Johns Hopkins, Worcester Polytechnic Institute and Yale we have designed and supervised construction of a 50 million gallon per day water supply for the new paper mill of the West Virginia Pulp and Paper Company at North Charleston, South Carolina in cooperation with the City of Charleston, involving a twenty mile tunnel and a new filtration principle for boiler feed water treatment; a 10 million gallon per day water softening and filtration plant of novel design for St. Petersburg, Florida; an outfall sewer for Miami Beach, Florida laid in rock trench, discharging into the Atlantic Ocean

MARRIED: June Anne Thornton, New York, N. Y., June 4, 1936.

CHILD: Susan Shepard, Aug. 19, 1938.

Since our twenty-fifth anniversary, my enjoyment of which was rudely interrupted by an attack of gout, my routine of life has been greatly, and, I am glad to say, most pleasantly, altered by my marriage in 1936 and the birth in 1938 of a remarkably healthy and vigorous daughter. The cessation of my wanderings and vacation trips to Havana or Bermuda, so enjoyable during the period of the "Experiment noble in purpose," has been more than compensated for by a very happy home life.

My interest in numismatics continues,—I have recently been president of the Boston Numismatic Society which this year celebrated its 80th anniversary and am a member of the Council of the American Numismatic Society in New York, as well as a member of various European societies the activities of which are now hidden under war censorship.

A number of my monographs on numismatics, especially on the period of the French Revolution and Napoleon, have been published in The Numismatist, the leading American journal on coins and medals.

Adelaide Hare, Dec. 25, 1925.
Thomas Ives Hare, Jan. 27, 1927.

DIED: Providence, R. I., Aug. 17, 1939.

If Tom Powel's character had to be stated in one word, that word would be "honorable." His loyalties were his life. They were backed by abilities which made him useful to two cities, and to scores of personal clients.

Soon after his ninth birthday, he started to attend Diman School (now St. George's) in Newport. He remained ten years. Within a year after graduating from Harvard, he had become established in the investment business in Providence, doing much work and spending his summer vacations in Newport. Except for service in the Navy, 1917-19, this remained his life. He made it highly successful, not by going far afield, but by bringing to it a sympathy and insight unusual in banking and in the management of estates.

Having come from an old-fashioned New England home, in which the interests of his father and older brother were scientific and domestic, the hurly-burly of a Harvard Freshman Class, with its clashes of personal interests, had no importance for him. He was already an experienced and bold motorist. With his brother, Samuel Powel '08, he had made a pioneer tour from Rhode Island to the Province of Quebec, in one of the primitive Locomobiles. He had started, indeed, at the turn of the century, to drive a car resembling a large tea-kettle, mounted on wire wheels and steered with a tiller.

Such interests, with a great deal of sea-bathing, and long country rambles, held him in boyhood. He was too light and slender for football. He cared little for tennis, hockey, boxing and other combative games. He was not glib in the classroom. Neither at school or college did he have much chance to study subjects that interested him. He would have become an honor student in the present-day economics courses and Business School. At home, in the presence of his father and of Dr. Wolcott Gibbs, the great Harvard chemist who lived almost next-door, Tom Powel was a deft, intelligent user of laboratory apparatus. Confronted by academic courses in languages, literature and so forth, he saw no reason to attempt to excel. He saw organized athletics for the bore they so often become.

At Harvard, therefore, he was not orientated until, by a happy chance, he went out for the business end of the Lampoon. The annus mirabilis of that magazine came when it moved—with Tom Powel, as treasurer, reconciling the points of view of men forty years his senior—from its dusty garret on Dunster Street into its house of curious splendor on Mount Auburn Street. Only Lampoon editors of that time can realize how much his mature grasp of finances, his horror of waste, and his never failing energy in doing detail work, meant to the Lampoon then and afterward.

Many of his close college friendships sprang from the Lampoon, and they grew closer as time went on. He never outgrew a friend. He was incapable of either snobbery or flattery. Not naturally gregarious, no easy hand-shaker, he schooled himself to become an able investment broker. He remained with Kidder, Peabody & Co. in Providence from 1911 through 1930. But as his financial experience ripened, he was glad to become associated with the Providence National Bank as investment counsel. There, in his last decade, he served as trustee, administrator, appraiser, and financial manager, to an ever-increasing number of people.

It was confining, methodical work. He was no delegator. He did the detail work himself, either for old people unversed in affairs, or young people who thought their incomes should be much larger, despite the ten depression years.

Tom Powel saturated himself in the endless details of these accounts, and brought to his work an overflowing sympathy, good humor, and affection that disarmed criticism. He was that rare thing, a banker whom everyone liked, a trustee whom everyone trusted. Someone said of Sir Walter Raleigh, "he could toil terribly." Tom Powel drove himself terribly hard, regardless of physical effects. Despite outside conditions, many accounts he served grew in capital and interest. He died in harness, remaining to his last working day a shrewd buyer, an effective seller, and the most genial and sympathetic of counsellors.

The two women in his life were his mother and wife. His mother, born Hope Ives Binney, lived beyond the appointed span of seventy years. It is natural for a mother to dote on her last-born, and she did. But Tom, in his turn, doted on her. It was an extraordinary relationship. They were more like gay contemporaries than mother and son. He married later in life than most of his classmates. His wife, born Hope Knight Hodgman, gave him a comradeship marked by the same bubbling humor. They were the most light-hearted of help-mates. Their three children started life in an atmosphere of delightful gaiety.

On Indian Avenue, Newport, turning their backs on the now rather mossy gorgeousness of Bellevue Avenue, the Powels built a summer home which—quite characteristically—consists chiefly of one immense room. Had there been skeletons, they would have found no closets. There was no wall-board, no divisions in the house or the family.

With all his attention to detail, his long working hours, and his starched white banker's linen and dark suits of clothes, there was a certain impish flamboyance in Tom Powel. Long after his hair turned white, he insisted on riding a motorcycle part way to work every day. This he called economy. Those who saw this bank director and church warden burning up the roads knew better.

He was not fond of liquor, despite the Lampoon traditions of his day. But all through national prohibition, he solemnly concocted nauseous wines in his basement workshop, and offered them with glee to unwary guests. At one of the many family auctions he conducted, he bought in a pot de chambre identified as having been frequently used by George Washington. This relic he reverently displayed, to the astonishment of visitors, in a black walnut book-case in his impeccable Victorian drawing room in Providence.

The years brought him ample fortune, partly by inheritance, but chiefly by prudent investment and unswerving attention to detail. Fortune made no difference in the way he lived. He drove the same Stutz Bearcat roadster for twenty years, and turned it in, at last, in such perfect condition that it is still often seen on the roads near Newport. He was thrifty, but not near. He valued money not for itself, but for what it can do.

For instance, when much fuss was being made about raising a graduates' fund to be annually spent at St. George's School, Tom Powel raised—almost single-handed—another kind of fund to be invested toward the insurance and pensions of elderly teachers. He served as a member of the City Council of Newport for many years, but was too conservative about spending public money to be truly popular thereon. As Republican candidate for mayor, he was soundly defeated. But he was in endless demand as a director or committeeman among companies, libraries, and charitable institutions in Providence and Newport. He belonged to many clubs. But he cared little for the distinctions that were given to him. He was proud, without vanity, of the good causes he started and managed.

RECORDS OF THE CLASS

His naval service was almost entirely on board the battleship Wyoming, where he was promoted from ensign to lieutenant, senior grade, and witnessed the surrender of the German High Seas Fleet at Scapa Flow.

From every point of view his life was successful. But it was more than successful. It was genuinely useful to the profession he served with honor, and to the communities in which he lived.

In November, 1937 with the help of Messrs. Charles M. Werly and S. H. Cunningham, the George Putnam Fund of Boston was organized. This is a mutual investment fund, but is operated with a balanced portfolio at all times; that is, a due proportion of bonds and stocks are held instead of a wholly common stock list as so many others have done. We believe that this is like a new model automobile. To date the growth results have been very satisfactory.

As is doubtless the case with most of my classmates, my life for the past five years has followed the pattern and tempo set by previous years. I am still engaged in technical chemical research on problems concerning calcium carbonate (chalk) and related materials, and their utilization particularly in the paper and pigment industries. The fruits of technical research eventuate into patents, and since our twenty-fifth anniversary report I have had issued to me, and to myself and co-workers, twenty-two additional United States patents and seven additional Canadian patents. These are my only publications during this period. These patents are put into commercial use by licensing, through a group of affiliated companies I formed some years ago.

As to recreation, I still incline mostly to the physical and try to take the seasons in stride,—skiing and skating, mountain climbing, boating and swimming, a little tennis, and hiking. My golf has become steadily worse, and it is now practically abandoned as a hopeless and rather uninteresting chore.

✠ CHARLES HARVEY RAYMOND

MARRIED: Anita Caldwell, San Diego, Calif., Feb. 28, 1915.

DIED: Berkeley, Calif., Mar. 14, 1939.

During the regular college terms at Berkeley, at ten o'clock on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday mornings, as I trudged toward the northwest steps to Wheeler Hall, on my way to the classroom, Charlie Raymond would be coming down the steps from his nine o'clock class. The second I caught sight of the limping figure with the pale, drawn face, my heart grew warm and glad in anticipation of his greeting. His spontaneous smile, suddenly irradiating his eyes and face, and the cheery quality of his voice, were completely infectious. The rest of the day was braver and more gallant for his greeting. He was no careless optimist. He knew suffering, physical handicap, hard work, disappointment, and the tragic ironies of human nature. All these were seamed in his face when it was in repose. But in his heart there was an inexhaustible fund of genuine and undaunted human kindness. The sight of a friend spread that fine spirit all over his face and set his voice vibrating indescribably.

He was utterly easy and natural in all he felt, did, and said. Yet there was nothing slipshod about him. He abominated procrastination and slovenly work. He held his students to strenuous endeavor. He was stern with the congenital slacker. But toward conscientious effort of whatever grade of natural ability, little or great, he was profoundly sympathetic and generously encouraging. In result, he made fast and devoted friends among all sorts of self-respecting, lively men. When he foregathered with them, his simple, affectionate, and gallant spirit was a leaven that permeated the whole company. Nothing ungenerous, nothing of mean and self-regarding calculation thrived in the vicinity of his spirit. To be small-minded within the range of his influence was instinctively felt as shameful. Whether his friends were immature youths or mature men, unknown to the world or well known, of little or of much importance in the walks of life, his beneficent influence and their quick reaction were the same. He was a touchstone to all that was best in them.

He loved human contact. He was a social favorite, in no light regard for an entertaining mountebank, but in quick recognition of his essential magnanimity and engaging modesty. About him there was not one trace of affectation of any sort. His ready humor was clean, hearty and antiseptic. He laughed with people, not at them. He liked to play cards and other games. He was interested in sports. He was an accomplished dancer. He gladly but temperately enjoyed the luxuries and amusements of good living. He liked to bear a modest part in intelligent but natural conversation. Ostentation, self-conceit, and "side" in others distressed him and made him silent and awkward.

In all his work he was sane and indefatigable. His teaching in journalism was distinguished by wise restraint of sensationalism and by sincere emphasis upon accurate expression and uncolored facts. He was not poisoned with newspaper hocus, bunkum, and ballyhoo. The University of California was fortunate to have its work in journalism in such hands, and it was proud of his sanity and honesty. He was a successful executive in several fields. He was ever ready to lend a prompt and helpful hand to other workers. He was generous both in his estimate of others and in the giving of himself, his time, and his possessions to his fellows. His inspiration had the quality of sunshine, steady and sure, capable of dispelling the dull clouds of inertia, discouragement, and selfish preoccupation.

To know him was to know the humane spirit at its cultured, unaffected best. To remember him is to have vision of Christian charity.

CHILDREN: Ruth Elizabeth, July 23, 1913, Leslie '34, married Sewall Henry Newman, Dartmouth '34.

My business connection in Hartford, Connecticut, which I had just begun at last report, did not prove satisfactory and I left there in July, 1936 to start a wall paper business of my own, under the name of The Richardson Co., in Watertown, Mass., where I have been ever since. Business was good with me in 1937, but in 1938 and 1939 it was progressively poor—but— I am still hanging on.

In the middle of December, 1939, I slipped on a muddy slope, my left leg doubling under my body in the fall—the result, both bones broken near the ankle plus a bad dislocation. At the present writing I am still hobbling around on crutches but hope to discard them soon.

Last year, as a hobby, I took up the writing of song lyrics, in an attempt to see if I couldn't produce something better than the words of the average popular song. Have had one song "Keep America Free," written in collaboration with Mr. Roy Harlow of Boston, accepted for publication. I hope it will be ready for sale sometime this year. Some of my other lyrics are being set to music but nothing is ready for publication.

As for recreation, Mrs. Richardson and I have had a couple of short sea trips during this period which were enjoyed to the utmost. The other never-to-be forgotten event, our 25th, will always stand out as a high light in our lives and if our succeeding reunions afford but a fraction of the enjoyment that afforded, they will be worth coming many, many miles to attend.

MARRIED: Ruth Dodd, Aug. 15, 1914 (died Aug. 23, 1917).

DIED: Brooklyn, N. Y., Feb. 16, 1939.

After leaving Harvard, Charles W. Ross, devoted considerable time to a study of the designing and erection of the low price type of homes—a subject then claiming the attention of many architects and building speculators throughout the country. Later, he engaged with much success in the erection of such homes in various parts of Queens, Long Island, N. Y., Teneck, N. J. and elsewhere. He was an active worker in his profession up to and including his 50th year. After this age he became subject to long periods of illness which handicapped him in his work, till his death, February 16, 1939.

Lake Superior ranges, with special examinations in Canada. The above work is in connection with iron ore exploration and mining operations.

Outside of the above activities, general consulting practice has continued. This included an investigation of mining subsidence or caving due to mining for Phelps Dodge Corporation in connection with copper mining in Arizona. Other special problems have been handled for miscellaneous clients in the Lake Superior region.

The summer of 1939 was spent in a mineral examination and geological survey in the interior of the great Labrador-Ungava peninsula, an uninhabited wilderness of arctic moss, stunted spruce, half-drowned, marshy tundra, rugged mountains, and innumerable lakes, little-explored, almost un-mapped, and nearly a fifth the area of the United States. The great continental glacier, which still covers Greenland, has but recently released its grip on Labrador, and its mark is everywhere fresh on the land. The soil from a few feet down is still frozen, and humus is almost non-existent. Access is entirely by pontoon-equipped planes. The rocks are the oldest of the earth's crust, and it is most interesting to find the whole Lake Superior rock series reproduced in this remote sub-Arctic land. The entire expedition was saddened by the loss of one of our two planes, with its pilot and the radio operator. A search by nine planes for many weeks failed to find any trace of them. Months later another search, for a plane and three men lost in some other expedition, and never found, I believe, found our plane, abandoned. A grave, marked with a cross, some twenty miles from the plane, marked the pilot's end, and about a mile further was the body of the radio operator. The ever-waiting, implacable wilderness had triumphed once more, exacting its usual price for the mistake of getting lost. The mineral industry remains, in the words of a Cornish mining friend, "an 'azardous hoccupation," in spite of all our modern inventions. But it is among the most fascinating in the world.

A little over three years ago increasing business required more room, and I now occupy the Longyear building, at the address given.

PUBLICATIONS: "Geology of the Lake Superior Iron Deposits," presented at the Annual Metal Mining Convention of the American Mining Congress at Chicago, September 23rd to 27th, 1935. This was published in the Mining Congress Journal, at Washington, D. C., for March, 1936, and was subsequently published again in the Transactions of the Lake Superior Mining Institute for the year 1936.

Also, an article by the writer on the "Geology of the Lake Superior Iron Ranges" was published by the Lake Superior Iron Ore Association of Cleveland, Ohio, as Chapter 2 of their book "Lake Superior Iron Ores," late in the year 1938.

The section on "Mine Subsidence" in the forthcoming new edition of Peele's Mining Engineers' Handbook was written by the writer.

Also, the National Research Council has in process of publication, a symposium containing an article on the "Structural Relationships of the Lake Superior Iron Ores" which was written by the writer.

Gertrude Florence, Feb. 25, 1921, Pembroke '43.

Since the last report, Charles has received an A.B. degree from Harvard and Gertrude has entered Pembroke College. These achievements have been especially gratifying to the family circle and are considered the most outstanding events since the memorable reunion of 1935. I still continue the practice of starting the day with a brisk walk before breakfast. Reasonably good health, for which I thank God, enables me to enjoy fishing, hunting, skating, swimming and mountain climbing. This recreation in the open air takes care of my physical side and tends to retard the muscles from getting flaccid. During the past decade, Mrs. Ruch and I have climbed Mount Washington once a year, but in 1939 we celebrated by climbing to the summit three times. This is an outdoor sport which I recommend to the members of the Class of 1910, whose heart and legs are strong. My religious activities are centered in Grace Church in Providence, where I try to point out to a class of young men the advantages of the spiritual life. The radio furnishes most of my entertainment and I derive pleasure from contacts with Masonic brothers at lodge meetings. With each passing year my love of nature seems to deepen, and for the contribution of our Alma Mater to this state of mind I take this opportunity to express my profound gratitude.

Prior to a couple years ago, I spent the rest of the past five years trying to understand, and to apply to my business, the gyrations and perambulations of the increasingly multitudinous political and regulatory innovations which certain gentlemen (?) at Washington, (including Harvard men,—God forgive them) toyed with in their academically theoretical endeavors to analyze, comprehend, castigate, and otherwise condemn that form of business formerly known as “Investment Banking.”

After three years of bewilderment and bedevilment, as to whether, according to prescribed, but ever changing regulations, I was “officially” a “Broker”,—a “Banker”,—a “Dealer”,—an “Investment Banker”,—both, either, or neither, or what, and why, and taxed as such, I finally came to the mature conclusion that, adequate as I had previously conceived to have been my education at the hands of dear old Alma Mater,—plus an active experience of some twenty odd years,—(very “odd”)—in the business,—I, nevertheless, was too dumb, or too senile, to comprehend what it was all about, and too helpless to do anything about it, much less to conduct such a business at a profit.

I, therefore, did the obvious: (one of the rare, and really sensible decisions in my entire career) I retired from the tumultuous arena, to devote my remaining years of more or less consciousness, to my first Collegiate Love,—design, and its application to the cultivation of flowers and shrubs, in their aesthetic relation to the higher sensory aspects of the genus homo, (sometimes dubbed, "Landscape Architecture"—"Gardening" to you).

Last year, by one of those rare coincidences known as "Acts of God", I discovered that Classmate Jack (Doc) Millet, was doing some professional stunting up my way; so, at his suggestion, I moved my "retirement" some twenty miles north of my Glens Falls home, and came to his place at Diamond-Point-on-Lake-George, N. Y., to "plant flowers" around his 850 acre perambulum. This being quite a garden to till, I expect to remain here "in retirement" for some time, "messaging around" with plants, and, incidentally, getting acquainted with "Nature-in-the-raw."

All of which is, of course, important as hell,—or is it.

HERBERT STEVENS SANBORN

OCCUPATION: Investments and live stock brokerage, 50 Congress St., Boston, Mass.

HOME ADDRESS: 58 Oak Ridge Rd., West Medford, Mass.

MARRIED: Genevieve Louis Fosdick, Somerville, Mass., July 1, 1922.

Along about the time of our last report, the "Raw Deal" so cut down the raising of live stock in the west, that the packers here were obliged to make many changes in their methods of purchasing. This, in turn, made the handling of shipments to the East, which had formerly been a good business for us, dwindle very badly. So, while still carrying on with what remained in the old line, I turned primarily to the sale of investments as a business.

In 1936 both my mother and my father passed away within a few months of each other.

As for recreations, in 1937 my wife and I took a couple of weeks' cruise to the Caribbean and in 1939 we spent the summer in Europe, entering through the Mediterranean countries and returning from England. All along the line, including in Germany, we heard so frequently the statement, "There will be no war", showing how little the people knew what was going on; actually, we beat the war home by only a week.

Photography still remains a hobby but now I have added colored movies, of which I have some pretty fair examples from our last summer's trip.

I liquidated my business and in the spring of '37 made a rather hurried trip with my wife and daughter to Italy, Austria, Germany, France and Holland.

On my return I became associated with the Mason-Neilan Regulator Co. of Boston, makers of pressure reducing valves and automatic controlling instruments, and am with that company now.

The last five years have wrought few changes in the comparative quiet of my life. My chief interest is still in the work in which I am engaged at the University of Buffalo, the study and teaching of the Classics.

If there is one thing that has become increasingly apparent to me during the last years, it is that the world in which we live more than ever needs an understanding of the great minds of the past. While here and there a strong voice has been raised in the educational world emphasizing the need of a reversion to the study of the humanities, the general trend of educational policies has been in the other direction. I have always believed that the ancient classics cannot be made to live unless they are interpreted to the young by other means than learned exposition. However important that may be to the specialist, the immediate job of the lover of antiquity is to vivify his interests by the spoken word for those who seek his guidance in the search for truth.

This philosophy accounts for the scantiness of my contributions to the mass of learned literature on Classical subjects, which has become top-heavy to the extent of threatening to bury in its fall the very foundations upon which it rests. In spite of general indifference to the importance of our work as a living force in the world of men, and not the resuscitation of dead bones, I rejoice in the few who continue to seek us out and are willing to work for ideas that stand for more than bread.

As the years have passed, I have enjoyed increasingly pleasant and intimate contacts with several of my former masters who taught me in my undergraduate years. These contacts were happily renewed through the work my daughter and my son-in-law did under them in the graduate schools of Radcliffe and Harvard.

My chief recreation continues to be sailing on the waters of Lake Erie. Recently I have managed to add something to my small stock of mathematical information by seriously taking up the study of navigation and its principles—a rebuff, I hope, for those who smugly maintain that literature and science do not mix!

RECORDS OF THE CLASS

Warren Francis Scribner was born August 9, 1887 in Lowell, Massachusetts. His parents were Commander Edward H. Scribner of the United States Navy, and Carrie Alnette Davis. He went through the primary grades in the Lowell schools and graduated from the Lowell High School in the spring of 1906, entering Harvard in the fall of that year.

Scrib was an excellent student and found no great difficulty in completing his academic course in three years. In our senior year he stayed on and went to the law school where he continued for another year after our graduation. His social instincts and his great number of friends in the college rather handicapped his work in the law school and he came to the conclusion at the end of 1911 that if he were to get his law degree he should try for it somewhere else. Accordingly, he entered Boston University in the fall of 1911 and received his LL.B. in 1912. For five years he practiced his profession but was not associated with any other lawyers nor with any firm.

Shortly after the outbreak of the war in 1917, he enlisted in the aeronautic branch of the service and was sent to the Ground School at Kelly Field, where he received, in due course, his commission as second lieutenant. He was then transferred to Wilbur Wright Field at Dayton, Ohio, as assistant supply officer. While in that post, he acted as judge advocate of the General Court and met Sara Frances Newman, whom he married, September 26th, 1919. Just before this marriage he had obtained a postwar position with Hayden, Stone & Co. in their Boston office, where he remained until 1920.

While he was very happy in his association with Hayden-Stone, where he found a number of classmates employed, including Lester Watson, Dick Hoyt and Laurie Bartlett, he made up his mind that the same conditions which had obtained in his two years in the law school were handicapping him in his work in Boston, and when an opportunity offered to go to Minneapolis as manager for Paine, Webber & Co., he jumped at the chance. In this firm too he had a lot of friends; Al Everts, Morris LaCroix, of our class, and Ward Paine, Yale 1910, whose sister LaCroix had married. Right from the beginning, Scrib began to make all kinds of friends in the Twin Cities. The office, under his guidance, began to step ahead, and in spite of the great shock which he experienced early in 1923 when his wife deserted him, taking with her their son Bill, (Wm. H.) who had been born on December 4, 1922, he weathered the storm; his friends rallied to his support, and the business of the office advanced by leaps and bounds. By this time he had established a branch office in St. Paul, and, shortly thereafter, one in Duluth.

On April 24, 1926, he married again. This time the lady of his choice was Rhoma Glyde Gale, who was a recent graduate of the University of Minnesota. A very sweet and tiny little girl was born to them on December 27, 1926, and on May 8, 1934, they adopted a tough little redhead whom they called Richard Scott. A son, Peter, had been born to them on March 23, 1934, but had only lived three weeks. On January 1, 1934, Scrib was made a general partner of Paine, Webber & Co. and his office in 1935 had the distinction of leading all the other Paine, Webber offices, both as to number of transactions and profits.

While in college, Scrib played on the basket ball team in 1908 and 1909, and on the Association football teams for the same years. He was always active in sports and kept fit by playing very good squash in winter and golf in summer. In the spring of 1936, while fighting a brush fire at his home near Hopkins, Minnesota, he wrenched his knee and was operated on shortly afterward. A blood clot developed, and after about five weeks in the hospital, he died very suddenly on June 15, 1936, and was buried in Minneapolis. At the time of his death, Scrib was a member of the Minneapolis, Minikahda, and Harvard Clubs of Minneapolis, and the Harvard Club of Boston.

His hearty laugh, universally good temper, and his enjoyment of friends made Scrib a truly lovable and an appreciated character; never demonstrative in his charities, he was always helping someone, either financially or with good advice. In college he roomed the last two years with Jim Gary, Leavitt Edgar and St. John Perret in Westmorley, where so many of his classmates found themselves.

Scrib was always a very loyal Harvard man. Although his distance from Boston was quite considerable, he returned to our Fifteenth, Twentieth, and Twenty-fifth reunions and enjoyed them thoroughly. His friends in Minneapolis were legion and he has indeed left a vacancy there which will be hard to fill.

MARRIED: Reina J. Finn, Boston, Mass., June 24, 1925.

DIED: March 29, 1940.

Joe Sheehan enjoyed college. He liked to play basket ball, he did not have too hard a time with his studies, and he liked to be the center of an ever widening circle of friends.

When he graduated, he started with all the fire that he had shown in his collegiate career, to get ahead; but the clothing business did not appeal to him, the brokerage firm that first employed him did not last, so he went into business with his father. Then the War came along and he enjoyed every minute of it. He was a natural company commander. He went to France as captain of the 304th Infantry and came back with the 320th. Then came the period of war readjustment, when he and his brother ran a small battery business. Finally, in April, 1921, nearly eleven years after he graduated, Joe got started up the ladder which had few more rungs for him to climb when he died. He went to All America Cables as director of Personnel, where he stayed until 1934, with increasing responsibilities. Leaving there, he went to the Securities and Exchange Commission in Washington and in 1936 went to the United States Maritime Commission as executive director. In 1938, he was elected president and director of the American President Lines, Ltd. and was actively and most successfully and happily carrying on in that position when he died suddenly on March 29, 1940.

It is easy to see why up to the time of the War, Joe's progress had been from a worldly and financial point of view, at least, horizontal. He was too young to be given enough responsibility to justify his capabilities. When he finally did get his chance, his boundless energy, quick ability to appreciate situations and solve their problems (and possibly his smile) swept aside all obstacles.

We shall miss him from Reunions, for he could easily and naturally take up his college friendships where, for geographical reasons if for none other, they had been dropped in June, 1910.

He married Reina J. Finn, at Boston, June 24, 1925, who with two daughters, Jane and Virginia, survive.

OCCUPATION: Architect, 122 Ames Bldg., 1 Court St., Boston, Mass.

HOME ADDRESS: 11 Chestnut Place, Brookline, Mass.

MARRIED: Anna Lowell Gardiner, Gardiner, Maine, Sept. 14, 1919.

CHILDREN: Henry Richardson, Jr., July 23, 1920, Harvard '42.

Hayden Richardson, June 17, 1922.

Robert Gardiner, June 3, 1924.

Hugh, Mar. 17, 1928.

Anne, May 8, 1931.

During the last five years my golf has somewhat improved but my skiing has steadily declined until last winter I had the humiliating experience of being dragged down a mountain on a toboggan with a twisted leg. I have stopped racing a boat but have become this year commodore of the Beverly Yacht Club, and my oldest boy is doing better with the boat than I ever did.

I have served a term as president of the Boston Society of Architects, have been made a fellow of the American Institute of Architects, and been elected a member of two learned societies: the National Institute of Arts and Letters, and the National Academy of Design.

In 1936 President Roosevelt appointed me to the National Commission of Fine Arts, and the same year Mr. Morgenthau made me consulting architect to the Treasury Department, to pass on the design of all Federal buildings such as post offices, court houses, prisons, etc.

In 1938 I was elected to the Board of Trustees of the Carnegie Institution of Washington which is devoted to scientific research; runs Mount Wilson Observatory and the 100 inch telescope, studies among other things volcanoes, terrestrial magnetism and genetics, and has a Department of Historical Research which is now focused on the study of the ancient Maya civilization. As chairman of the Committee of Trustees on Historical Research I was sent to Guatemala, Honduras and Yucatan this January to inspect the work of the Institution in the discovery and excavation of ancient Maya cities, and recommend future policies.

The death of my partner Mr. Charles A. Coolidge in 1936 left me head of the firm with increased responsibilities. I have since then designed two buildings for Harvard: one the Littauer Center of Public Administration, built on the site of the old Hemenway Gymnasium facing toward Harvard Square. The design is of great simplicity, suited to the beautiful white granite of which it is built, the same granite as is used in University Hall. The second is the new Hemenway Gymnasium behind the Littauer Building to the left bordering on the Common. It is filled solid with squash courts, with a basketball court and badminton room on top. Classmate Gavin Hadden was consulting engineer.

Two years ago the Class of 1910 figured heavily in the construction of a new High School for Fitchburg, with my firm as architects, Pat Ware as chairman of the School Committee, and Douglas Crocker keeping the City in a favorable frame of mind.

My most difficult commission, however, was the replanning of the Massachusetts General Hospital and the construction of the new Central Building, which unifies the whole group and towers over it 14 stories high. For a long time it looked hopeless, but now so many people claim to have designed it that I feel it must be good.

HARRY CECIL SIMON (BURK SYMON)

OCCUPATION: Motion picture director, Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation, 444 West 56th St., New York, N. Y.

HOME ADDRESS: 1 West 67th St., New York, N. Y.

MARRIED: Freda Casson, Boston, Mass., Feb. 18, 1911.

CHILDREN: Gail, Sept. 20, 1914.

David, Oct. 26, 1918.

During the last five years I have abandoned the Theatre for Motion Pictures. For the past three years I have been test director for Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation, directing all those young actors and actresses considered prospects for motion pictures. It has been exciting and interesting work.

There have been a number of "trailers" I have directed with such celebrities as Edwin C. Hill, Robert (Believe-It-Or-Not) Ripley, Lowell Thomas and others.

It was my privilege also to direct Raymond Massey in a "short" on Abraham Lincoln for the Will Rogers Memorial Fund. The script was written by one of Harvard's most distinguished sons, Robert Sherwood.

Another work I accomplished was the co-authorship of an educational picture titled, "The Birth of a Baby" sponsored by the American Committee on Maternal Welfare, Inc.

✠ MITCHELL SISSON

MARRIED: Hattie Clare Wingersky, Boston, Mass., Aug. 21, 1917.

CHILD: Harrison Edgar, Feb. 23, 1921.

DIED: Brookline, Mass., June 1, 1936.

Mitchell Sisson (Mike as he was affectionately known to us) died on June 1, 1936 at the Massachusetts Women's Hospital in Roxbury, Mass. He was taken there when it was known he was dying. Having been on the staff of the Women's Hospital for years, and dearly beloved by everyone from superintendent to nurses, he knew he would be cared for by kind and loving friends.

RECORDS OF THE CLASS

Mike was brought here as a child from Russia, where he was born. His family settled in East Boston. They opened a grocery store. Before he had reached his teens Mike was installed as clerk and delivery boy. Those of us who knew him can well remember that he was up at five every morning filling and delivering orders. We can still see him, making his rounds with a basket, loaded with groceries, in one hand and a heavy milk can in the other. He thought it was fun.

Mike entered Boston Latin School in the fall of 1902 and graduated with his class—no mean feat for a boy who barely had time for study.

While in college he earned his keep and paid all of his expenses.

His various occupations read like a U. S. Labor Department listing. For a while he was chief usher in the Colonial Theatre in Boston. Many of us will remember his generosity in the matter of seats. He read gas meters for the Cambridge Gas Co. He was a clerk and soda dispenser in a drug store. He was a street car conductor. He lectured in the infant incubators at Revere Beach. He taught English in the Boston evening schools. And he managed to have a good time, as well. Yes, Mike was a most unusual boy. Incidentally, he completed his work for his A.B. degree in three years.

In the fall of 1909 Mike enrolled as a student in the Harvard Medical School. He thoroughly enjoyed his courses, his association with the faculty, his fellow students, and the poor people with whom he came in contact in his school work.

After graduation from the Medical School, Mike served an internship of about eighteen months. Shortly thereafter, he opened an office for the practice of medicine in Hanover Street, Boston. His patients were almost entirely made up of poor Italian people.

In 1914, Mike Sisson began practice in East Boston, and devoted most of his time to obstetrics and pediatrics. He also served as school doctor up to the time of his death.

His love and understanding of children helped immeasurably in his work at the Children's Department in the Massachusetts General Hospital and for the Milk and Baby Hygiene Association.

As his professional work was very largely done among Italians he became quite adept in the use of the language, and his patients loved him for it. He was affectionately referred to as the Jewish dottore.

HARVARD CLASS OF 1910

In 1918 he presented himself for physical examination for admission to the U. S. Medical Corps. They discovered that he was suffering from a serious kidney ailment, which eventually caused his death. Having been rejected for army service, Mike immediately turned to help out in the serious flu epidemic. He saved many lives.

After the war, he opened an office in Commonwealth Avenue, Boston. But did not forget his Italian patients in East Boston. He loved them and they loved him. Mike had wealthy patients, too. They regarded him very highly for his skill as a physician, and respected his fine, manly qualities and loved him for his understanding and for the sweetness of his disposition and manner.

Those of us who knew Mike Sisson will never forget him. He was so very thoughtful and generous. He was blessed with an urge for happiness. No matter how "tough the going" Mike was always there with a smile and a kindly word.

Sisson was married on August 27, 1917, to Hattie Clare Wingersky, of Boston, who survives him together with one son.

Cabell Waddill, Dec. 7, 1920.

I returned hot-foot from Central China to check in on our 25th Reunion, reaching Cambridge on the appointed day breathless but intact. In August, 1937, after furlough, I left my children in America, and, with my better half, went to England, where for three months I spoke in parishes of the Church of England regarding Anglican mission work in China. This speaking tour was under the auspices of the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel, the "Venerable Society" which was organized in 1701 for the specific purpose of sending mission priests to the American colonies!

On leaving England, I returned to the work in China, going via Siberia and Manchuria, with a very interesting stop-over of ten days in Leningrad and Moscow, which included an unsuccessful attempt to visit the grave of John Reed, '10, within the walls of the Kremlin.

RECORDS OF THE CLASS

In China once more, I was put in charge of our work in Ichang, a thousand miles up the Yangtse from Shanghai, but after a year returned to my family in this country, since it did not seem right to remain away from them indefinitely, and the children must remain here for their education. After eight months as assistant priest at St. Stephen's Church, Providence, I accepted a call to become rector of Grace-St. Luke's Episcopal Church, Cincinnati, where I was delighted to find Charlie Lee '10, in my flock. In 1941 I hope to see my namesake graduate from Harvard, thirty-one years after "the Old Man."

Rublee Clark, Mar. 15, 1922.

A few months after our twenty-fifth reunion, no other employer wanting me, I had recourse to Roosevelt '04, and I spent an interesting time as one of the editors of the Massachusetts Guide Book which was issued in 1937 by the Federal Writers' Project. But another Harvard man, William Appleton Lawrence '11, became bishop of Western Massachusetts, and I have lately been busy in different fields of church work under his direction. The most interesting of these has been the organizing and directing of choir festivals where twice a year from 150 to 250 singers have come together for an afternoon rehearsal and an evening choral service. Also for three years I have been the official chime ringer of the Springfield City Hall, giving daily programs in the fortnight preceding Christmas and weekly programs the rest of the year, as well as carillon recitals elsewhere. I assisted Gordon Hutchins '02, in the preparation of a musical edition of the official hymnal of the Episcopal Church, published in 1936 by the Parish Choir, Boston. Next September I expect to go as senior master and director of Music at St. Edmund's School, a new church school for boys which is to open at Stockbridge, Mass.

HARVARD CLASS OF 1910

The time spent on the Federal Writers' Project was by no means wasted, for I learned a great deal of local history and travelled to many out-of-the-way beauty spots, thus gaining much knowledge of my home state which I should never have got otherwise and which has already proved useful to me in my real calling.

In the college year 1934-35 I had the chance to earn a tuition scholarship by teaching at the College of Music of Boston University, and thus gained a Bachelor of Music degree in 1935. It was very funny to be an undergraduate on June 10 receiving a diploma with a class of 22-year old kids, and the next week join other grayheads and baldheads in celebrating a twenty-fifth!

My children are having to win their own educations. The oldest worked for two years after leaving high school, saved his money, and is now putting himself through college; the other two have similar plans. It might have been better for me had I been compelled to get mine the same way.

DIED: Tamworth, N. H., Feb. 20, 1939.

When Steele left college, he went immediately to Tamworth, N. H., to start in life as an apple grower, but the New England climate finally brought to an end that interesting if financially hazardous occupation, and for a time he was in business with his brother in Auburn, Maine, as wholesale and retail distributors of automobiles. In spite of his earlier experiences, Tamworth finally drew him back and he settled there to establish an insurance business and to become immersed in the affairs of the town. In such a situation it is incumbent on every one to take part in the operation of the town government and the town affairs and, to those who have native ability, many positions are waiting, so Steele lived there an increasingly useful person to his community. He enjoyed the possibilities for sport that life in this locality offered. He was one of the very early skiers and also had every opportunity to hunt and fish in the proper seasons.

He married Margaret Twitchell at Haverhill, Massachusetts, in 1911, and she survives with three children, Frederic Lincoln III, Elizabeth Allen and Esther Freeman.

MARRIED: Adèle Preble, Vineyard Haven, Mass., Aug. 15, 1917.

CHILD: Geneva, Nov. 26, 1928 (died Nov. 29, 1928).

During the five year period since our 25th Reunion I have been engaged mainly as assistant to my father in his Probate Law practice. Following a brief illness he passed away on May 24th, 1939 (aged 89 years) bringing to a close a long and honored career in the Law (62 years active practice) and an enviable record of unselfish public service. He was Waltham's second mayor in 1886.

Since my father's decease I have devoted my time largely to a supervision of my own apartment house real estate; one might say, however, that I am merely acting as “Collector” since the major portion of rental receipts is regularly passed over to the bank holding the mortgage, and to City Hall in the form of taxes.

As for recreations; due to the fact that I number myself among the few who do not possess automobiles I find real enjoyment in cross country walking—a lost art, indeed, these days when the average mortal feels compelled to drive a car in order to secure a newspaper from the shop one-eighth mile distant. I have, in fact, been looked upon with suspicion on certain occasions when I have had the nerve actually to refuse a ride.

My chief hobby rests within the magic realm of books and authors, an avenue of "escape" open to all of us yet one so easily neglected. And as opportunity (and funds) permit I engage too in that mild form of insanity known as First Edition collecting, particularly as pertaining to that "low brow and degraded" pursuit, Detective Fiction.

Frederick Overton Burnley, Feb. 25, 1925.

In 1937 I was granted a Guggenheim fellowship and, in company with my sister, sailed for Sweden in September to work in Svedberg's laboratory at the University of Upsala. After a look at Norway I settled down in the ancient town of Upsala and it did not take long to understand why this is called "the City of Eternal Youth". I learned to commute to Stockholm, where my wife lived on the sunny shore of Mälär Lake and to ask in Swedish for a week-end, 3rd class, return ticket.

I delivered a lecture on enzymes in Stockholm in November and was presented with the Scheele medal. Over Christmas I traveled to the Austrian Tyrol to take skiing lessons.

We now spend summers at Duxbury, Mass. where I bought my children a delightful old sea captain's house with 9 open fireplaces and a barn where my boys make, or rather try to make, boats. I play tennis at Duxbury and fish for mackerel in the bay, watching meanwhile for signs of the red spinnaker of our boat "Enzyme" in case my children happen to be racing.

My publications are entirely scientific and therefore too far removed from football or horse racing to interest classmates. My present aspirations are to travel in unusual places—Greenland, Thibet, Persia, or to spend several years cruising in a small motor-sailer.

Edward Dana, Feb. 12, 1918, Union '39, Harvard Business School '41.

Carolyn Louise, June 25, 1922, Connecticut College '43.

I left the brokerage business in the summer of 1934 to go with the T.E.R.A. of New York State. I was connected with the state T.E.R.A. office at Glens Falls, N. Y. having charge of surplus commodity distribution for the eight northern counties of N. Y. My residence was 113 Union St., Schenectady, N. Y. and I commuted to work each morning, a drive of 45 miles. In the spring of 1936, W.P.A. took over Surplus Commodity Distribution as a Project and I automatically became Supervisor of Distribution for District 1, N. Y. From then until the spring of 1938 my office was in the W.P.A. offices at Glens Falls and I continued to commute from Schenectady.

My work during this time was both interesting and enlightening, although winter driving through the Adirondack mountain section was rather tough at times.

RECORDS OF THE CLASS

In the spring of 1938 surplus commodity distribution was discontinued as a W.P.A. project and I found myself out of a job.

From the spring of 1938 until Sept. 1939 I was unemployed but managed to keep busy at our farm in Charlton, N. Y. from spring to fall and with the affairs of the Schenectady Curling Club, of which I was president during the winters.

In September, 1939 I went to work in the City Engineer's office at Schenectady as safety engineer on an extensive Pressure and Gravity Sewer Project operating as a W.P.A. Project under city supervision and this is my work at the present time.

After leaving college, entered the brokerage business but always gave much time to civics. In 1937 sold out interest in Rogers & Tracy in order to devote entire time to public affairs. For three years president of the Citizens Association, oldest civic organization in Chicago. Conducted a campaign which resulted in new street signs being placed at all street intersections in the city (the first in 30 years). Led a severe but successful, public fight in defense of the parole system, in which he was opposed by all the newspapers, but had the backing of all the important civic organizations and universities. Helped to secure a new building code for Chicago. Conducted a successful public campaign to prevent the threatened commercialization of Chicago's park system. Director of the Area Project, Chicago, Crime Commission, Investors Protective Association, Chicago Academy of Criminology, chairman Illinois Citizens Committee on Parole, etc. Appointed to various commissions by governor of Illinois. Spend much time with artists and musicians, member of various hunt clubs, including Virginia and National Fox Hunting Association. Enjoy the country and spend much time driving open car. Play chess every day. Hate the radio and useless noise.

✠ WALTER WESSELHOEFT TUPPER

UNMARRIED.

DIED: Newtonville, Mass., Jan. 11, 1939.

Walter Wesselhoeft Tupper's life work was early mapped out. In college he was a member of the Forestry Club and all his life was devoted to forestry. Immediately after graduation he spent three years in the Graduate School, specializing in botany, and went from there in 1913 to the University of Michigan, where he remained until failing health brought him back home to Newton, Massachusetts, where he died January 11, 1939. At the time of his death, he had the full rank of professor.

As we knew him in college, he was a serious-minded, rather shy, student; but with a charming underlying trickle of humor which was of course at its best in a small group of his intimate friends but which could, and frequently did, show itself with those less near to him. As he progressed in his chosen profession he continued to study, receiving his A.M. in 1912, and his S.D. in 1918 and he took half years away from Michigan, once to study at Harvard and another time at Yale, at both places working on the microscopic structure of woods. His work naturally required writing and he contributed many articles to scientific magazines. A bachelor, he joined a number of clubs, ranging from botanical to golf, and of course he belonged to many scientific societies.

During the War, from 1917, he was with the Equipment Division of the Signal Corps and later in the Bureau of Aircraft Production became senior inspector of aircraft propellers. Then for a not easily discernible reason, after the Armistice he joined the American Red Cross field service and was stationed at Camp Devens.

In all, he lived a full life, contributing much, enjoying amply what he received in return.

HOME ADDRESS: 1 Main St., Fairhaven, Mass.

MARRIED: Anna Elizabeth Fiske, Boston, Mass., Jan. 3, 1912.

At the present time, I am the owner of Van's Auto Park and Shell Filling Station, Sullivan Sq., Charlestown, Mass. President and general manager of the Clear'oc Co. Inc., New Bedford, Mass. Vice-president and director of Pierce & Kilburn, Inc., Fairhaven, Mass. Vice-president of the Luncheon Club of New Bedford, Mass. and vice-president of the Harvard Club of New Bedford, Mass.

Practically all of my business time in the last five years has been spent running the Clear'oc Co. of which I have a controlling interest.

For recreation, I made two trips to Puerto Rico where I have interests in pineapple plantations. My wife and I made a summer trip to Europe spending most of our time in Italy and returning home through France. Then a short Bermuda trip last year.

The most important event of the last five years was the hurricane of Sept. 21, 1938. We live directly on the water at Fairhaven on New Bedford Harbor. It was a wonderful experience, but once is enough. The expression "Hell and High Water" is a very apt description.

Activities have not greatly changed in the last five years. We have traveled a little more, now that both the children are married and have homes of their own and both reside in California now.

Since the 1935 report my professional routine has been varied twice by active participation in pending cases; the trial in municipal court here of a drunken driving charge wherein the new technique of laboratory tests for alcoholism was for the first time here put to the test of legal scrutiny, and the argument on appeal before the Supreme Court of Nebraska in a local anti-trust case (Hompes v. B. F. Goodrich Co., Neb., 288 N.W. 367) (1939), wherein my portion of the brief and argument was to uphold the constitutional validity of the statutory provision for threefold damages.

Since the last report in 1935 I have continued as director of the International Migration Service, 122 East 22nd Street, New York, N. Y. I have also served as United States expert, appointed by President Roosevelt, on the Temporary Committee of Government Experts on Assistance to Indigent Aliens of the League of Nations which met in Geneva for its second and third meetings in 1936 and 1938. This Committee drafted a model convention on the subject of Assistance to Indigent Aliens which was recommended to the governments of the world for adoption.

HARVARD CLASS OF 1910

In April, 1938, I was loaned by the International Migration Service to serve as executive secretary of the President's Advisory Committee on Political Refugees. In this capacity I attended the Conference of thirty-two Governments convened at Evian France, in July 1938, by President Roosevelt to consider the problem of refugees from Germany. I assisted Mr. Myron C. Taylor, United States representative who presided at the Conference, in the preparation and conduct of the Conference. As a result of this Conference the Intergovernmental Committee composed of the same governments was organized in London in August, 1938. Mr. George Rublee of Washington was elected its Director. I returned to London with Mr. Rublee in August, 1938 to assist him to establish his office. Since that time as secretary of the President's Advisory Committee on Political Refugees I have participated in sending commissions of experts to British Guiana, the Dominican Republic, and the Island of Mindanao in the Philippines, to determine the feasibility of settling refugees in those countries. The reports of these commissions were all favorable and the settlement of refugees is now proceeding in the Dominican Republic and in the Philippines.

HARVARD CLASS OF 1910

Since the last report my son, Arthur Lawrence Washburn, Jr., was born on December 31, 1936. In the same year I became physician to Bellevue Hospital on the Fourth Medical Division upon the retirement of Doctor Harlow Brooks. In June, 1939 I enjoyed very much meeting my Medical School classmates once more at the 25th Anniversary of the Harvard Medical School Class of 1914.

My main occupations have been the practice of medicine and clinical rounds and teaching on the wards of Bellevue Hospital. My hobbies are the collection of etchings, prints, and engravings, especially of old medical engravings and books having to do with the history of medicine. Recreations include riding from the Squadron A. Armory, handball in winter, and in the summer tennis, golf, and the activities of the Lawrence Beach Club.

✠ HATHAWAY WATSON

MARRIED: Marguerite Pettit, New York, N. Y., June 30, 1910 (divorced June 5, 1928); Marie Blackmore, St. Louis, Mo., June 5, 1928.

CHILDREN: Marguerite, May 20, 1911, married Waterfield McLallen, IV. (divorced.)

GRANDCHILDREN: Waterfield McLallen, IV., Nov. 1, 1933.

Robert McLallen, Dec. 28, 1934.

Walter Johnston, July 27, 1913, Harvard '36.

Hathaway, Jr., June 25, 1916, Harvard '37.

DIED: Chicago, Ill., June 18, 1937.

When we were in college, everybody in the Class knew Hath. He was a brilliant athlete until his enthusiastic enlistment in a military company guarding the ruins of the Chelsea Fire brought on varicose veins, which were later to keep him out of the Army. He belonged to many clubs, but used them as a stopping place rather than a permanent resting place and he took part joyfully and with a great earnestness in Class politics.

Immediately on graduation he married, and one result of the marriage was our Class Baby. He moved immediately to Chicago, which was his home for the rest of his life. Extremely energetic, with a very clear head and an easy charm in meeting people, he rapidly progressed in the security business, which was his chosen work.

When the entry of the United States into War became imminent, and although he had been turned down for all the Officers Training Camps, he tried the Canadian Recruiting Commission without success, again the result of his earliest attempt at the military, so many years before; but he finally was called in the draft in June, 1918, for a stay of ten days. Eventually he ended with a very important civilian job in Washington—classification of personnel for the Army, and that work kept him until the following October.

Returning home, he formed in the spring of 1919 an investment corporation which was very profitable and which he eventually sold out most advantageously, planning—it would seem—to retire; but in 1930 he was back in business again and remained in business until his death.

The joy he had in his college career he never forgot. He loved to come back to Cambridge for the Reunions or for any other occasion and when he arrived every one knew it, and knew it to their great pleasure. He had the fortunate faculty of making friends easily and the unusual attribute of never tiring of giving of himself to these friendships. He must have had some dark days, but few people knew of them.

He died very suddenly June 18, 1937, of an unusual infection. His second wife and three children, the Class Baby and two sons, Walter Johnson and Hathaway, Jr., both Harvard graduates, survive.

RECORDS OF THE CLASS

Among my professional activities of the last five years has been work in a research group organized here to develop the Klystron, an invention of one of our former graduate students, Russell H. Varian, for sending and receiving radio waves about one hundred times as short as those now known as short-wave. These waves behave differently enough from ordinary radio waves to offer prospects of new uses and make the research very interesting, at least to those who are in it.

Still more interesting to me, however, is the result of getting back into the flying game, four years ago, after seventeen years on the sidelines, this time as a private pilot. Since then flying has been my principal hobby and recreation, especially after one Friday the thirteenth, on which I bought a ship of my own. This year I have had the unusual privilege of indulging in a hobby and calling it business, as director of Civilian Pilot Training at Stanford, in the local unit of the program conducted by the Civil Aeronautics Authority.

The only really important thing for me to say to you all, therefore, is just what I have been telling the younger generation, namely, that if you fly with any reasonable amount of care, it's a safe game and a grand sport. Better try it.

In 1933, I said I had hoped to get back to ranching again. This I was able to do, after 4 more years in the real estate business, and purchased a lemon ranch in 1937, which, so far, I have not regretted.

Contrary to the current impression, lemon ranching is just as hard work as any other farming and subject to most of its vicissitudes, but, with it all a most absorbing and worth while business.

My hobbies still continue to be sailing, swimming, badminton, and tennis, with the addition of shop work.

Laura, June 6, 1931.

I have nothing of importance to add since the report of five years ago. I have continued to live in Cohasset with my wife and three children, been engaged in the same business and enjoy much the same friends.

My former indifferent tennis game has slipped to almost nothing, but I am now getting much enjoyment out of golf which still seems to be improving a little.

I have done practically no travelling outside of New England in these five years, but have done some cruising along the coast in both directions. I have no publications to list.

After having suitably electrified the rural areas of the county, as previously reported, I was made a geologist and expected to write the geology of the region. This I did after a fashion and my report appears consolidated with the reports of more learned gentlemen in the Massachusetts Guide.

In my travels about the county I collected many short stories. One of these attracted the attention of a famous Boston publisher and I was requested to submit a novel along the same lines. No one yet has told me a complete novel, so the publisher is still waiting.

In the meantime I have joined the U. S. Coast and Geodetic Survey. We are the boys who erect the steel towers on various hills, fly flags from others and have playthings like red and white tripods that we occasionally set in the middle of the travelled way. We do not do this primarily to annoy the autoing public. However, you may have noticed us and wondered what it was all about.

The big idea is to settle land boundary disputes for all time. As it is now, each local surveyor has his own idea as to what constitutes a proper reference point. When two do not agree and their surveys overlap an argument ensues. We go to the stars and bring extremely accurate measurements down to earth. But we do not stop at the earth's surface. We place points on a theoretical cone—the Lambert Conic Projection method, to make it absolutely clear—and sink cement monuments in the ground with a bronze disk on top to mark points on this cone. We also stamp data on the disk that the local surveyor understands. And from this it is possible to show you the points in space where your property was even if it and all marks are completely washed away.

It is a good idea to tie your property in with our marks and find out if you own what you think you do. Besides, there is a sporting chance that you own a slice of some neighboring property as well.

an old well established concern, one among the pioneers in the manufacture of paper mill and paper bag making machinery.

This opportunity to get back to the field of engineering was very welcome and I have been very busy here and have found the work most interesting. Besides plant engineering and general maintenance work I have made several sales and service trips for the company in New England and the eastern states.

My change in work necessitated our leaving Hartford, where we had lived for about twenty years and making a new start in Willimantic but new friends have made a new home here. Both boys are in Antioch College in the middle west mainly because their plan of study and cooperative work appealed to us very much. Edward, the older son, is planning to go to Yale Medical School in the fall. Perhaps my grandsons may go to Harvard.

As far as recreations and hobbies are concerned I do some bowling in the winter and play some golf in the summer. Much to my regret tennis is definitely out. Some time later I hope to do some writing along engineering lines and with regard to my present work.

I was so distressed at reading the last question that all thoughts have been driven from my head. Are we that old—so that grandchildren become a standard form, printed question?

Still fishing and hunting. In the city, pursuing fires. Rather uneventful, probably far less eventful than it should be. My younger boy goes along with me, and being young and inexperienced harbors the delusion that the old man is a fairly good shot and knows how to handle a flyrod. This is happiness enough—until he grows older and learns better.

CHILD: Beverly, Oct. 4, 1908.

DIED: New York, N. Y., Apr. 11, 1939.

Willard Huntington Wright, known to all the English speaking world as S. S. Van Dine, was in college only for our Freshman year. In 1909, he was literary editor of the Los Angeles Times. He came east in 1913 to edit the Smart Set and later the International Studio. From that he turned to serious writing on cultural subjects such as "Modern Painting, Its Tendency and Meaning," "The Creative Will." Then came a nervous breakdown, with two years in bed. Deprived of all serious books he was allowed for a while detective stories, of which he read so many, one after another, that he gradually was impressed with the peculiar technique which that form of writing required. When he returned to a semblance of health he had made up his mind to write this type of fiction and his amazing knowledge, a result of his earlier studies, brought in the creation of Philo Vance, sleuth, that immediately took the public fancy and, as he says in the 25th Report, he made more money with each one of his Philo Vance stories than from all nine of his serious books put together.

When he died on April 11, 1939, his death was recorded in every newspaper in the country as a creator of supreme detective fiction.

RECORDS OF THE CLASS

It was only a few of them that knew, or at least that printed anything of, his early career. In the two clearly set off sections of his literary life it was his lot to bring great pleasure to his readers, in the first to a specially educated, comparatively small group; in the other to the numberless readers of detective fiction. It is not usually given to one man successfully to write for such diverse requirements.

GEORGE GRAY ZABRISKIE

OCCUPATION: Lawyer, 49 Wall St., New York, N. Y.

HOME ADDRESS: 23 Gramercy Park, New York, N. Y. and St. James, L. I., N. Y.
UNMARRIED.

As of January 1, 1940 I resigned as a member of the firm of Sage, Gray, Todd & Sims, and am now practicing law independently at the same address as before, 49 Wall Street, New York. The greater part of my work at the present time deals with estates. During the first half of 1939 I spent a great deal of time in Washington studying railroad law and legislation, both in regard to reorganizations and to railroad matters in general. Otherwise I know of nothing to add to the 1935 report.
